Quang et al.,

I have just learned that Duke has a correction to its response.

The costs per kit provided in the earlier response actually included both shipping and assembly.

Duke Energy Customer Kits exclusive of shipping and assembly = $10.57
Non-Duke Energy Customer Kits exclusive of shipping and assembly = $2.83

Sorry for the Confusion.

Quang, et al- In response to the question below, the Company submits the below response:

QUESTION:

In regards to the Energy Efficiency Education Programs for Schools Program, what is the cost of an Energy Efficiency Starter Kit?

RESPONSE:

Free Energy Efficiency Starter kits are available to children families (both Duke customers and Non-Duke customers) participating in the School Program. The program cost of the energy efficiency starter kit is $15.26 per Duke customer (just the kit contents). There is a smaller starter kit, (fewer measures) that is available upon completion of a survey to the Non-Duke customers with children participating in the Schools program. The Non-Duke customer starter kit costs $7.10 per kit. Duke Energy does not claim savings for Non-Duke customers, but engages the Non-Duke families to make sure all students have a similar experience which improves school adoption of the program.
