Joey, hosted an exchange student from Bolivia. So while Lesa was learning firsthand about the economic depression plaguing Argentina since 2001, her family in Kentucky got to witness another, brighter side of South American culture. Their student, Ramiro "Danny" Bracamonte, showered them with gifts from Bolivia, and often played music for them on his zamponas, a traditional instrument akin to a pan flute. While Lesa Thomas was

HEARING NOTICE

France. Physical therapy in Australia. Nursing in Ecuador. There's also the chance to sightsee: Big Ben, the Eiffel Tower, the Acropolis, Stonehenge, and a whole world of sights. And the best part: many times, depending on the program, students can do all that while still paying their school's regular tuition and fees.

Cultural Give-and-Take

Through exchange programs like AYUSA (Academic Year in the USA) or American Field Service, high school students can also enjoy study abroad in virtually any country around the globe.
