LPN'S
CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll be the leader today. You're not out to control anyone — you rule by getting the input of everyone involved. You invite discussion. But ultimately, it's you who makes the decision.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You love people, in theory. You'll come across individuals who challenge that theory today. You will benefit from making an extra effort to kindle a feeling of warmth for every single person you meet.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Even the smartest person can't know everything about every subject. You know what you know, and it shouldn't be a reason for pride or shame right now. Share what you know, and admit what you don't so that others can fill you in.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You've been so mentally taxed lately, and you need to blow off some steam. Get into activities that make you breathe and sweat. Physical exertion makes you stronger. It also impresses someone near to you.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You can delve deeper into your subject of interest without much expenditure. You don't have to go to school to learn about it. There is enough information in magazines, in books and on the Internet to guide you along.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Because you are mature and worldly, you recognize that other people are going to feel differently than you do about things and wisely withhold some of your opinions.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You have that "wow" factor today. It's not so much about what you look like or what you say. It's your internal strength and confidence that allow you to forget yourself and get involved in the fascinating world around you.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You have a right to be satisfied with your current level of education and stature — you've worked hard to get where you are. And yet you'll still be driven to better yourself through reading and conversation.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). There's a reason you gravitate toward those who are even-keeled and predictable: You're busy. You don't have time for drama or for having to spread your attention in unexpected ways.

make great strides toward real answers for their constituents, the reality is glaringly apparent that next to nothing has been learned or at least contributed to the cause by government in decades

* The fact that the medical insurance industry, under its own uncertain challenges and fates, is understandably scared to death about extending coverage for affected families when they see this as a bottomless money pit with no expectations for positive and sustained outcomes

* The growing frustration with the catching more childhood cases of these disorders sooner means that specific dietary intervention can be all the more corrective, rapid and lastingly effective."

She added that although there has not yet been a funded clinical study on her work, she has both seen and received back countless confirmations that her dietary protocol is delivering both clinical and family managed results for a multitude of individuals on a consistent basis. Her feeling is that this natural science has yet to attain its full potential in mainstream medicine because instruction on food choices lacks the backing of the multi-billion dollar pharmaceutical industry engine.

"I know that these days everyone and their brother seem to have their own theory about what constitutes proper and improper nutritional practices," she added. "However, in this particular case, I believe that the rapid positive results we're consistently producing are undeniable and self-evident. Not only can we greatly reduce the human and financial costs of future occurrences of these disorders, but using food-based therapies we can also improve or reverse a high percentage of existing cases. Once the research community at large decides to join us, we'll do even better."

you're in good company! Well, for the most part, we try not to judge, but we were not surprised to find Paris Hilton and Britany Spears on the dropout list. We were surprised by some of the other famous people who dropped out of high school and later earned their GED credential.

Everyone knows Bill Cosby. He earned his GED. So did actor, Christian Slater and comedian Chris Rock. Dave Thomas, founder of Wendy's Restaurants, was a GED graduate, and so was Ruth Ann Minner, governor of Delaware. Mary Lou Retton, Olympic gymnast, musician Waylon Jennings, and Jerry Garcia of the Grateful Dead—ALL HAVE GEDs! So does Michael J. Fox. That's good company!

People from all walks of life have left school for various reasons and gone on to earn their

In 2010 alone, the 9,357 students in Kentucky who earned a GED will potentially increase their earnings by more than $2.4 billion over a 30-year career given the average salary gap between high school dropouts and those citizens with a high school diploma!

Now, to even better news.... Kentucky Adult Education will offer FREE GED testing for tests taking place March 15 through June 30, 2011, to encourage and support adults in earning a GED. KYAE will reimburse test centers $55 for each new test taker completing the full battery and $25 for each person retesting in a particular subject area.

TECHNICAL SIGHT-RE

Through implantation of light-sensitive microchips in their eyes, scientists have been able to restore partial sight for blind patients suffering from a group of inherited eye diseases that afflict one in 4,000 individuals worldwide. Patients receiving the implants were able to perform such tasks as reading the hands of a clock, discerning several shades of gray, locating an identifying tableware, and reading combinations of letters on printed pages. The microchip that makes all this possible is approximately 3 millimeters square. It contains 1,500 light receptors that transmit a grid of electrical impulses through the patient's nerves that generate a 1,500 pixel image that patients can see. This breakthrough technology should help patients afflicted with retinitis pigmentosa and other inherited eye diseases.
