COMMENTS: It was peculiar listening to the comments and concerns at the public hearing that was held at Bryan Station High School without anything being said by anyone from Kentucky utilities' battalion of staff people. Could this be possibly construed as trying to avoid self-incrimination?
A business that is harming people's health and devastating our natural resources and gouging its customers to do so would likely remain silent rather than risk bringing attention to itself and its activities, just as a mischievous child does to avoid getting into trouble with a parent, teacher, or whomever.
If the Kentucky Public Service Commission continues to permit KU's current mode of business, there really is no point in having a PSC. The coal companies and utility companies should be allowed to take, run, and charge at will.
