Comments:

It is absolutely outrageous to even consider raising our water tax when the quality of service we receive is so poor. Residents are paying for basic utilities and deserve reliable water service, not excuses. Our community has been dealing with extremely low water pressure, which impacts everything from daily household needs to safety and sanitation. On top of that, the water quality is so hard that it causes constant buildup and damage to pipes, appliances, and fixtures—costs that homeowners are forced to shoulder out of their own pockets.

Raising taxes under these conditions is not just unfair, it is irresponsible. Before a single dollar more is taken from residents, the water district should first address the service failures and ensure we are receiving the clean, reliable, and safe water we are already paying for. To increase our costs without solving these long-standing problems is a direct failure to uphold your responsibility to the public.
