Case 2007-00134

Dear Chairman Goss:

I have been following this case closely, having been deeply involved in the FLOW effort. For the record, and despite what KAW executives have implied from time to time, this case was not initiated by any of us who were involved with FLOW, as I am sure you know, though for obvious reasons, I and a few others have been more than casually interested. The issue is the same: it transcends the question of ownership and goes to the question of what is most cost effective and utilitarian.

I would like to second the arguments Dr. Solomon has made. I have followed the CAWS effort also and agree with their arguments, which, in addition to Dr. Solomon's, go heavily to protection of the environment.

I do "appreciate" KAWS claws-and-nails effort to improve the returns for their company and its stockholders. At the same time we cannot be grateful enough that this PSC is there to balance the scales and assure a mutually beneficial long term determination.

I am especially impressed with your patience and your thorough and comprehensive approach to this difficult confrontation.

Sincerely,
