I would like to express my dismay at the action begun by LG&E that I have read about in today's local newspaper. Among many reasons I am against LG&E getting ANY rate increase is the fact that LG&E like most utilities is allowed to recover many if not a majority of its losses incurred, by using "disaster codes". Monies are recovered just as you and I are able to deduct losses from events such as this. It is also my opinion that a sizeable percentage of lines down are the direct result of LG&E negligence by allowing residents to plant, and grow trees that hinder many aerial easements that are supposed to be kept free and clear for access by utilities such as LG&E. Admittedly LG&E does spend time and money trimming some easements but you would find that is a small effort . Were any customers able to collect ANY money from LG&E for their losses ?

Thanks, just wanted to gripe!
