Determined dieter planning to tour states on menu of Super Value meals

By SUSAN THURSTON
ST. PETERSBURG TIMES
Eric Kramp isn't dying anytime soon, he hopes, and he happily isn't sticking to a high school, he loved the idea of playing tennis outdoors in March. Kramp didn't flinch at turning 30 but panicked when as loomed. Tragedies struck a few of his co-workers. Life seemed so fragile.
"I started thinking about it, in general," he said. "When you states and several cities in Canada and Mexico, logging an anticipated 15,000 miles in the cheapest rental car he can find. Along the way, he'll couch surf — stay with strangers who offer their couches to travelers for free. He'll also play tennis in every state.
Kramp intends to shed many of the pounds he's gained by eating nothing but salads, side dishes and items from Wendy's Super Value menu. He'll keep an emergency supply in a cooler for places that don't have a Wendy's.
Kramp insists he's not trying to copy Jared Fogle, who lost more than 200 pounds eating Subway subs, or become the next Morgan Spurlock, of "Super Size Me" fame.
He did the Wendy's diet with his girlfriend in high school and lost 20 pounds in a short time. He knows it works and won't cost a bundle.
He also knows that day after day of chilli, side ceasar salads and mandarin orange cups will get old — and could backfire.
"It would be funny if I came back 50 pounds heavier," he said. "But I doubt it." In all, he expects the journey to last 80 days and cost him $6,000, which returns but can't guarantee it.
She hopes he comes back or at least stays in touch.
Kramp doesn't know what he'll do. He's got miles of road to think about it.
