Spurrier hopes QB change improves offense vs. Cats

By PETE IACOBELLI
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Steve Spurrier isn't happy with No. 18 South Carolina's stumbling offense, so he's benching quarterback Stephen Garcia and inserting sophomore Connor Shaw back in the starting lineup.

The Gamecocks coach isn't sure what to do beyond that.

"That's where we are on offense," Spurrier said Tuesday.

He added the team's needs to get more players involved and that the offensive line needs to step up.

Spurrier said the offensive line must block better, give whoever is playing quarterback more time to throw and to open up holes for running backs. The only change up front is likely to be Mike Matulis subbing at left tackle for Kyle Nunn, who continues to be out with a back injury.

The coach would like to get more players involved in the backfield and at receiver. So far, that hasn't happened.

"We sort of got stuck playing the same guys about the whole game," Spurrier said. "Hopefully, we can get more players out there involved in helping the team be successful."

Spurrier announced Garcia's benching after Monday's practice. The fifth-year senior made the decision easy for Spurrier with his poor play the past few games. Garcia, who's started 34 games for Spurrier, threw four interceptions against Vanderbilt two weeks ago and added two more in a 16-13 loss last Saturday to Auburn, which entered ranked dead last in Southeastern Conference defense.

Spurrier said Shaw's work at practice the past few weeks has the staff thinking he's ready to shine. That won't be easy this week with Kentucky (2-3, 0-2 SEC), which has the SEC's fourth-best pass defense.

However, only Auburn has given up more points and yards on the ground in the SEC than Kentucky. And up next for the Wildcats defense is the league's leading rusher in South Carolina star Marcus Lattimore.

"I hope they shake it up and don't turn it over to 21 (Lattimore)," Kentucky coach Joker Phillips said. "That's the shaking up I'd like to see done."

Lattimore has run for 677 yards and nine touchdowns this season. But he was held to season lows with 66 yards and 17 carries as Auburn crowded the line and forced the Gamecocks to beat the Tigers passing, something Garcia couldn't do.

SEC sacks leader Melvin Ingram could miss South Carolina's game with Kentucky because of a foot injury.

Spurrier said Tuesday that the defensive end was unlikely to practice this week and could sit out this weekend's game.

Ingram has 5½ sacks, two interceptions and a fumble recovery through five games.

School bands ask county to make education

by Teris Moodie

The Livingston Central High School band members can be found at some point during the school day in the LCHS band room practicing for whatever performance is coming up next. Most recently, this performance happened to be the parade at Smithland's annual Octoberfest celebration. "We practice really hard, but sometimes our instruments just aren't up to par," commented LCHS band and choir director Josh Johnson. "The middle school is in the same shape," he continued, "as far as elderly instruments that are past their prime."

In order to help alleviate this problem facing the music program at both schools, Mr.

Johnson and the students of both bands are reaching out to the community for help. "We ask the community that we represent to please help out," said Johnson. The bands are asking for donations of musical instruments in good condition or monetary donations that would go towards buying new instruments for the band to use. "We have so many talented students and they deserve to be able to play on better quality instruments," commented Johnson. "Please help keep music--good music--alive and well in our county."
