I am a member of the 100% Renewable Energy Alliance of Louisville (REAL), and retired solar installer.

My interest in rooftop solar is in keeping utility-scale solar farms as small as possible.

We will be 100% renewable in Kentucky in the near future, but an enormous amount of land will be required. I estimate that it will take 50,000 acres to convert LG&E alone to 100% solar. But the more rooftop solar we have - on houses, barns, warehouses, public buildings, vacant lots, and parking areas, etc - the less open land will be required.

No utility company can cover privately-owned rooftops with solar panels. We have to maintain the right of individuals to produce their own energy and supply the grid through Feed-in Tariffs. It is now the role of the PSC not only to regulate pricing, but to create incentives for proper electrical generation in the future.

Thank you for the work that you do. Please keep in mind that your decisions today are not only about nickels and dimes on the electric bill. They are about the weather.
