Identify the carbon price at which the model with base case load forecast and base case fuel prices would select natural gas combined cycle (NGCC) with CCS over NGCC without CCS if the model is allowed to economically select between the two generation resources.
2. Provide the probability of a loss of load event for LG&E/KU’s calculated summer economic reserve margin and the probability of a loss of load event for LG&E/KU’s calculated winter economic reserve margin, and explain how those probabilities were calculated.

3. Provide the levelized cost of energy (LCOE) for NGCC with CCS in 2022 and 2031 with base and high natural gas prices, as those terms were used in the IRP, and identify the costs used to calculate each such LCOE.
