Ms. Chambers,

As BellSouth is aware, Dialog Telecommunications Inc. is a small UNE-P based CLEC serving approximately 8,000 residential and 1,000 business customers in Kentucky. These customers are generally located outside the states largest population centers.

We rely entirely on the UNE-P platform to serve these customers; we have purchased neither switching nor transport from any other source. While we have discussed opportunities to deploy our own facilities in the future, the nature of the small cities and towns that we serve is such that there is not adequate density to support deployment of competitive switching.

Dialog offers only POTs services to our customers, we neither purchase nor provide to customers any high capacity loops. We turn away those few potential customers who require these products in order to stay focused on making the services that the vast majority of the population requires available to them with the highest quality and at a competitive price.

Therefore each of your requests is simply not applicable; there is no data for Dialog to provide for the above referenced case.

As Dialog is not a party to this case I do not believe that a response to the public service commission is required, but I am not entirely certain. Please contact me if you feel that my response is either inadequate or needs to be filed with the commission.
