KENTUCKY UTILITIES COMPANY

Response to Commission Staff's Second Request For Information
Dated July 31, 2012

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 46

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-46. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.04. Explain why, for April and May 2011, the amounts in column 3 are more than the total of the amounts shown in columns 1 and 2 for the same months.
- A-46. The amounts in column 3 for the 2005-2006 Environmental Compliance Plans Jurisdictional Revenues are more than the sum of Environmental Compliance Revenues Collected in Base Rates and in Environmental Surcharge in columns 1 and 2 for the months of April, May, October, and November 2011. This is due to the use of 12-month average revenues to calculate the monthly billing factor and then applying that same billing factor to the actual monthly revenues that results in a mismatch of ECR revenue and jurisdictional revenue requirement. During the summer or winter months, actual revenues will generally be greater than the 12-month average. During the shoulder months, the actual revenues will generally be less than the 12-month average. Any over or under-collection of ECR revenues is reconciled in the six-month and two-year ECR review proceedings.

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 47

Responding Witness: Lonnie E. Bellar

- Q-47. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.09, and pages 5-6 of the Testimony of Lonnie E. Bellar ("Bellar Testimony").
- a. Explain why the last three months of the test year were selected to form the basis for the proposed adjustment of off-system sales margins as opposed, for example, to the last four months or the last six months.
 - b. Provide the kWh sales level for the first quarter of 2012 that resulted in off-system sales margins of $141,329 shown on line 1 of Reference Schedule 1.09.
 - c. On a quarterly basis, for calendar years 2007 through 2011 provide KU's level of off-system sales in kWh and the resulting off-system sales margins.
- A-47.
- a. As discussed in Testimony of Paul W. Thompson on pages 13-16, primarily due to decreased natural gas prices and the weak economy, off-system sales margins have declined significantly. Using the most recent actual data was selected because it reflects a known and measurable level of OSS margins that can be reasonably achieved to establish rates in this case. As indicated in my testimony, the Company is providing monthly updates to the off-system sales margin adjustment (Reference Schedule 1.09) to reflect the most recent actual data. See the response to Question No. 71.
 - b. 124,494,000 kWh
 - c. See attached.

The attachment is being provided in a separate file in Excel format.

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 48

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-48. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.11. Explain the reasons for, and the type of, bill adjustments that comprise the $5,567,308 shown here. Provide a breakdown by rate class of these adjustments.
- A-48. The bill adjustments on Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.11 are supported by Conroy Exhibit P-7, Adjustment for Customers Moving to Cycle 20 Billing. The $5,567,308 is the total revenue from these customers that would not have been in test year revenue had the customers been on billing cycle 20 for the entire test year, and is provided by customer and rate class.

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 49

Responding Witness: Shannon L. Charnas

- Q-49. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.12, page III-10 of Exhibit JJS-KU to the Direct Testimony of John J. Spanos ("Spanos Testimony") and page 4 of the Testimony of Shannon L. Charnas ("Charnas Testimony").
- a. The amount of annualized depreciation expense on line 3 of Reference Schedule 1.12, $189,864,002, is roughly $518,000 greater than the amount shown on page III-10 of Exhibit JJS-KU. Explain whether this is solely due to the three month difference between the period covered in Mr. Spanos' depreciation study and the end of the proposed test year.
 - b. Based on test year end plant in service, provide a schedule at the same sub-account level as on page III-10 of Exhibit JJS-KU, which shows the derivation of the annualized depreciation expense amount on line 3 of Reference Schedule 1.12.
 - c. Provide a detailed description of the "assets set up for retirement obligations" referenced on line 19 of the Charnas Testimony, which result in the amount of $3,077,746 shown on line 5 of Reference Schedule 1.12.
- A-49.
- a. The difference of $537,466 is due to the additional plant added between December 31, 2011, the end of the period covered in Mr. Spanos' depreciation study, and March 31, 2012, the end of the filed test year.
 - b. See attached.
 - c. The "assets set up for retirement obligations" ("ARO") are the asset retirement costs established upon initial recognition of the liabilities for the asset retirement obligations. The depreciation on the asset retirement costs is removed from the depreciation expense per books since the effect of AROs is income statement neutral; it is offset by a regulatory credit on the income statement.

Response to Commission Staff's Second Request For Information
Dated July 31, 2012

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 50

Responding Witness: John J. Spanos

- Q-50. Refer to pages III-4 through III-10 of Exhibit JJS-KU to the Spanos Testimony. In Case No. 2011-00375, KU indicated that it would retire its coal-fired generation facilities at Green River and Tyrone.
- a. Explain whether all of the original costs for each component of the facilities to be retired are included on pages 4-10. If they are not, for each component that is not included, provide a list identifying each component by account number, account title and original cost.
 - b. Using the account numbers and account titles listed on pages 4-10, identify each component of the facilities to be retired, its original cost and salvage value that are included on pages 4-10.
 - c. Provide the date that each component of plant identified and listed in the response to parts a. and b. of this request were first devoted to public service.
 - d. For each component identified and listed in response to part b. of this request:
 - 1) the net salvage value that was included in accumulated depreciation on the date that the component was removed from the schedule of plant in service.
 - 2) Provide the date that the component was removed from service and the date that it was removed from the plant schedule.
 - 3) Provide the total cost of removal that was charged to the accumulated depreciation account.
 - e. For each component identified and listed in response to Item b., provide the total net salvage included in accumulated depreciation as of December 31, 2011.

- A-50.
- a. The original costs for each asset expected to be retired upon the final retirements of Green River and Tyrone are included on pages III-4 through III-10 of Exhibit JJS-KU.
 - b. These assets, shown by account number on pages III-4 through III-10, are expected to be retired by the final retirement of the plants at the end of 2015. As shown on pages III-210 through III-212 of Exhibit JJS-KU, each generating plant is expected to have a net salvage of (10) percent of original cost when it is retired. The estimate of (10) percent is not separated into cost of removal and gross salvage components.
 - c. The date each component of these plants was installed can be found by FERC account and location in the “Depreciation Calculations” section of Exhibit JJS-KU, pages III-278 through III-325.
 - d.
 - 1) These assets have not yet been retired. As discussed in part b), the expected net salvage value for each FERC account can be found on pages III-210 through III-212 of Exhibit JJS-KU.
 - 2) These assets are currently in service, but are expected to be retired by the end of 2015.
 - 3) These assets have not yet been retired, and as a result cost of removal has not yet been charged to accumulated depreciation.
 - e. Quantifying the precise amount of net salvage currently in accumulated depreciation for these generating units would require segregating all historical reserve activity from the installation dates of these units. Such analysis has not been performed for the depreciation study. However, the current remaining life depreciation rates are calculated based on the expected date of retirement (the end of 2015), and therefore the accumulated depreciation for each generating station will have the expected net salvage included in accumulated depreciation – that is, 10 percent of original cost.

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 51

Responding Witness: Paul W. Thompson

- Q-51. In Case No. 2011-00375 KU stated that it will not remove and restore the sites to a natural state at the Green River and Tyrone stations. Instead, it intends to stabilize these facilities to insure that they do not create a hazard to the general public.
- a. Provide a detailed schedule of the estimated costs to remove these facilities and restore the location to a natural state.
 - b. Provide a detailed schedule of the estimated costs to stabilize these facilities.
 - c. Provide a detailed list of all salvage values for each component of each facility.
- A-51.
- a. For electrical production facilities, with the exception of the old Waterside facility which was torn down (and paid for) by another party as the location for the new downtown Louisville arena, the Company has not historically torn down retired power plants. There are no current plans to take either the Green River or Tyrone plants to ground and to restore them to their natural state. Plans include action to protect them from the weather, to seal off all pipes and to secure the sites for public safety. No estimate has been developed for taking the facilities to a natural state.
 - b. The estimated cost to stabilize the facilities is $5 million for Green River and $3 million for Tyrone. While a detailed estimate was developed for Cane Run and is included as an attachment to LG&E PSC-2, Question No. 95, that level of detail has not yet been completed for Green River and Tyrone. The $5 million Green River and $3 million Tyrone estimates were based on the Cane Run total estimate and then scaled down to reflect the size differences.
 - c. No estimate of salvage values has been developed since there is currently no intention to take the facility down to a natural state.

Question No. 52

Responding Witness: Valerie L. Scott

Q-52. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.13 and page 4 of the Testimony of Valerie L. Scott.

- a. Page 2 of 4 of Reference Schedule 1.13 at line 4 shows percentages of how KU's test year labor breaks down between the amounts expensed and capitalized. Provide the percentages of the amounts of KU's labor costs expensed and capitalized for each of the calendar years 2007 through 2011.
- b. Page 2 of 4 of Reference Schedule 1.13 shows KU's test year operating labor was $100,908,714. This compares to $83,757,324 in operating labor during the test year ended October 31, 2009 in KU's most recent general rate case. The increase between the two test years is $17,151,390, an increase of 20.5 percent over a period of 29 months, which equates to an annual rate of increase of 8.5 percent. Provide a detailed discussion of the reasons for an increase of this magnitude, including, but not limited to increases in the number of employees

A-52. a. The table below represents the percentage break down between operating labor and construction/other for the calendar years 2007 through 2011.

Year	Operating	Construction/ Other
2007	64.636%	35.364%
2008	69.389%	30.611%
2009	67.844%	32.156%
2010	71.107%	28.893%
2011	71.091%	28.909%

- b. In the process of responding to this question, the Company identified an error in Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.13, related to an account with a credit balance and severance payments that were inadvertently included in the calculation. The net impact of these adjustments was to increase labor during the test year, thereby decreasing the amount of the proforma adjustment that should have been reflected in the original filing by $356,798. Attached is a revised Reference Schedule 1.13 showing the impact of the decrease on wages, payroll taxes and 401(k) costs.

The increase in test year operating labor was the result of wage increases, an increase in headcount and an increase in costs allocated to KU. Wage increases represent approximately an 8% increase over the prior test year. These wage increases included, but are not limited to, annual increases, promotions and net differences in the pay rates of replacement employees. The increase attributable to headcount was approximately 7%. This headcount increase was mainly attributable to increases in generation, transmission and retail employees. For additional information concerning the increased headcount, please see responses to Question Nos. 23, 31 and 39. The increase attributable to costs allocated to KU was 6%. This increase is a result of an increase in the allocation to KU based on its ownership percentage of joint-use assets primarily attributable to the dispatch of Trimble County Unit 2 in January 2011. In addition, the labor allocated to KU increased due to a shift in the cost allocation ratios that are based on headcount and total revenue and a decrease in labor charged to capital and other.

Question No. 53

Responding Witness: Lonnie E. Bellar

- Q-53. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.23 and pages 7-8 of the Bellar Testimony. In KU's most recent general rate case, its estimate of rate case expenses was $1,325,000. Provide the reasons for the increased estimate of $2,030,000, a 53 percent increase, for the current case.
- A-53. The actual recoverable rate case expense in KU's most recent general rate case, Case No. 2009-00548, was $2,014,503. The actual increase from the estimate in the last case is primarily attributable to the cost of the newspaper notices of $1,466,862. The actual amount from the last case was used to estimate the rate case expenses for the current case. See the response to PSC 1-55(b).

- Q-54. Refer to Blake Exhibit 10 and pages 4-5 of the Blake Testimony. The exhibit contains projected capital expenditures by KU for the years 2012 through 2016 as reflected in its 2011 10K filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC").
- Provide the projected annual capital expenditures for KU as reflected in its SEC 10K filings for each of the years 2006 through 2010 and its actual annual capital expenditures for the years 2007 through 2011.
 - The "Generating facilities" and "Transmission facilities" headings in the first column in the exhibit have, respectively, "(a)" and "(b)" after the word "facilities" but there is no explanation, footnote, etc. for these letters. Explain their purpose and state whether something is missing from the exhibit.
- A-54. a. Projected capital expenditures for each three-year period as disclosed in the 2006-2010 KU Annual Reports² were as follows:

KU ($ millions)	2007- 2009	2008- 2010	2009- 2011	2010- 2012	2011- 2013
2006	1,900
2007		1,465
2008			1,325
2009				1,180
2010					1,406

² KU did not file a Form 10-K with the SEC for years 2006 through 2010.

Actual annual capital expenditures for KU were as follows:

KU ($ millions) ³
2007	807
2008	681
2009	586
2011	326

- b. Footnotes “(a)” and “(b)” were inadvertently omitted from Blake Exhibit 10. The purpose of the footnotes is to explain certain costs included in the “Generating facilities” and “Transmission facilities” line items. The following are the footnotes as stated in KU’s 2011 Form 10-K filing:
- (a) Includes approximately $500 million of currently estimable costs related to replacement generation units due to EPA regulations not recoverable through the ECR mechanism. KU expects to recover these costs over a period equivalent to the related depreciable lives of the assets through future rate proceedings.
 - (b) Includes approximately $30 million of currently estimable transmission costs related to replacement generation units. KU expects to recover these costs over a period equivalent to the related depreciable lives of the assets through future rate proceedings.

³ Capital expenditures per the Statements of Cash Flows filed in KU’s Annual Reports for years 2007 through 2009 and KU’s 2011 Form 10-K for years 2010 and 2011. KU did not file a Form 10-K with the SEC for years 2007 through 2010.

Question No. 55

Responding Witness: John J. Spanos

- Q-55. Refer to page II-11 of Exhibit JJS-KU to the Spanos Testimony. The first sentence under the heading Schedules of Annual Transactions in Plant Records states that "The property group used to illustrate the retirement rate method is observed for the experience band 2002-2011 during which there were placements during the years 1997-2011."
- a. Explain whether the use of a 10-year experience band is an industry standard or is solely a matter of judgment by Mr. Spanos.
 - b. Explain whether it is coincidence that this 10-year experience band reflects placements for a period of 15 years or if this is a generic standard of some sort.
- A-55.
- a. The discussion on pages II-11 through II-23 of Exhibit JJS-KU is an example of the retirement rate method that uses hypothetical data, and the 10 year band is used for illustrative purposes.
 - b. See the response to part a). A 10 year experience band can have a range of placement bands, depending on the historical data.

Question No. 56

Responding Witness: John J. Spanos

Q-56. Refer to page II-27 of Exhibit JJS-KU to the Spanos Testimony. Provide a general explanation for why the life spans for the steam production Ghent units are consistently shorter than the life spans for the steam production Brown units.

A-56. There are multiple factors that explain why the life spans for the Ghent units are generally shorter than the life spans for the Brown Units. It should first be noted that the Brown units have longer life spans than estimated for any of the coal units in the fleets of both KU and its sister utility Louisville Gas & Electric Company. The Brown units are also at the upper end of the industry range of life spans for coal-fired power plants. As such, the factors that lead to differences in life spans between the Brown units and the Ghent units are a reflection that the Brown units can operate longer than is normally expected for coal plants. These factors include recent significant investments in these units and unique operating conditions for the Brown units.

All three Brown units have more common equipment than the Ghent units, and in particular the Brown units share a common scrubber installed in 2010. The installation of the combined scrubber was a major investment, and occurred later in the lives of the Brown units than was the case with the Ghent units, which had scrubbers either installed or upgraded in the 2007 to 2009 timeframe. As a result, the Brown units will be at an older age when the scrubbers reach the end of their useful lives (requiring an economic decision to either invest significant capital dollars or retire the units) than the Ghent units will be. The recent scrubber investment, which occurred at ages 54 and 47 for Brown units 1 and 2, also makes it more likely that the Brown units will last beyond the life span range expected for KU and LG&E's other units, as the scrubber investment represents a significant sunk cost for these units.

Additionally, the older Brown units (units 1 and 2) operate at a lower steam pressure than the Ghent units, and all three Brown units have a lower steam flow than the Ghent units. As a result, there is less wear and tear on the Brown units (especially 1 and 2), which allows a greater likelihood that these units could attain a life span in the upper end of the industry range than other units in KU's fleet.

Question No. 57

Responding Witness: John J. Spanos

- Q-57. Refer to page II-28 of Exhibit JJS-KU to the Spanos Testimony. Explain the reasoning for the cost of removal and salvage percentages being based on annual and three-year moving average bases as opposed to some other basis.
- A-57. The cost of removal and salvage percentages estimated for the depreciation study are based on informed judgment incorporating a number of factors, including the analysis of historical data. Standard practice in the industry is to analyze the cost of removal and salvage as a percentage of original cost retired. The annual percentages are presented to analyze these percentages for each year, and three-year averages are used to smooth fluctuations in the annual data. Both the annual percentages and moving averages help to analyze trends in the historical data. In the depreciation study, the overall averages for the period studied, as well as the most recent averages are also presented.

Question No. 58

Responding Witness: Lonnie E. Bellar

- Q-58. In its two most recent base rate cases, Case Nos. 2008-00251 and 2009-00548,⁴ KU proposed adjustments to its revenues and expenses based on the normalization of weather. Explain why KU did not propose a weather normalization adjustment in its application in this case.
- A-58. In addition to the cases referenced above, electric temperature normalization adjustments were considered in KU's Case No. 98-474 and in Case No. 8284, Case No. 8616, Case No. 8924, Case No. 10064, and Case No. 98-426, which were LG&E rate proceedings. In each of these proceedings, the Commission denied the adjustment, noting that LG&E had failed to adequately support the adjustment. The Commission however continued to endorse the concept of normalization and expressed a willingness to consider temperature adjustments in future rate proceedings. (See Commission's Order in Case No. 98-474, dated January 7, 2000, at 70.)

In Case Nos. 98-474 and 98-426, the Commission expressed concern that KU and LG&E had failed to file the supporting regression analyses, modeling and forecasting assumptions, and calculation details. The Commission also expressed concern about the use of 20-year average degree days rather than a 30-year average, noting that "previous electric weather normalization adjustments proposed in the LG&E rate cases were based on a 30-year average. The 30-year average is typically used in gas weather normalization adjustments." (Ibid., at 74.)

KU addressed these stated concerns in Cases No. 2008-00251 and 2009-00548, making modifications in the latter case to simplify the analyses. Nonetheless, the Commission expressed reservations in both cases about the advisability of electric temperature normalization adjustments. KU did not propose a weather normalization adjustment in its application in this case based on the Commission's decisions in these previous cases.

Question No. 60

Responding Witness: William E. Avera

- Q-60. Refer to the Avera Testimony, page 11. KU indicates that investors and rating agencies are aware that it can only recover its actual costs and that it earns no return on fuel, purchased power or natural gas supply costs and that it is exposed to disallowances in its energy procurement.
- a. In addition to actual cost recovery, explain whether KU is proposing to earn a return in conjunction with the items listed above and how that would be accomplished.
 - b. Explain whether any of the ratings agencies stated or implied to KU that it needs to earn returns on the items listed above in order to maintain its financial integrity or mitigate any perceived risk.
 - c. The fuel, purchased power, or natural gas procurement process is well established in Kentucky and should be well understood by KU. Explain what actions this Commission has taken to heighten either company or investor concerns regarding disallowances and how this relates to exposure to fluctuations in power and gas supply costs.
- A-60. a. No, KU is not proposing to earn a return on fuel or purchased power costs.
- b. Dr. Avera is not aware of any statements by the rating agencies that suggest KU needs to earn a return on fuel or purchased power costs.
 - c. Dr. Avera's testimony at page 11 did not claim that the Commission had taken any steps to heighten the risks associated with KU's ability to recover its power supply costs. Rather, his testimony explained that, despite regulatory provisions that allow for periodic rate adjustments to reflect changes in power costs, investors nonetheless recognize that utilities such as KU remain exposed to the potential need to finance power cost deferrals, especially during times of volatile energy prices, as well as to disallowances.

- Q-62. Refer to the Avera Testimony, page 21, and Exhibit WEA-2. PPL is listed as one of the companies in the utility proxy group. Since KU is a PPL company, explain why the inclusion of PPL in the proxy group doesn't introduce some circularity into the ROE estimates.
- A-62. In estimating the cost of equity for purposes of establishing an allowed rate of return, it is common practice to include the utility, or the parent company in the case of an operating subsidiary, in the proxy group. Because KU is a wholly owned subsidiary of PPL, and obtains investor-supplied equity capital solely from its parent, investors' expectations and perceptions for PPL provide one logical benchmark on which to estimate investors' required return. While expectations regarding the allowed ROE for KU would be considered in investors' assessment of the risks and returns associated with an investment in PPL, this is only one of many factors that form the basis for their expectations. As a result, there is no basis to exclude PPL on the basis of circularity.

- Q-65. Refer to the Avera Testimony, page 35. Since the sustainable growth approach requires an expected earned return on equity and the subject of the testimony is to set a return on equity, explain why this is not, in part, a circular argument.
- A-65. While Dr. Avera's testimony indicates that the earnings growth projections of securities analysts provide a superior guide to investors' expectations, the sustainable growth approach is frequently referenced in regulatory proceedings and is consistent with the theory underlying the constant growth DCF model. In implementing the constant growth DCF model, a key requirement is that the growth rates reflect the forward-looking expectations of investors, which includes their assumptions regarding the actual rates of return expected in future periods. These expected earned rates of return are dependent on the authorized rates of return that are expected in future periods, but this is also the case for future growth in earnings, dividends, and book value, which are all ultimately tied to a utility's ability to recover its reasonable and necessary costs of service, including a fair ROE. In other words, it is investors' expectations – including those for future allowed ROEs – that determine observable stock prices, and these are the only proper basis for the growth rate used in applying the DCF model.

- d. As documented in the response to subpart (c) above, the relationship between firm size and investors’ required rate of return in applying the CAPM has been documented for firms in the competitive and regulated sectors. The fact that the prices charged by non-regulated firms are established through competitive markets does not alter the fact that empirical research has demonstrated that the beta values used to apply the CAPM fail to fully reflect the risks associated with firm size.
- e. Unlike debt instruments, common equity extends to perpetuity. As a result, any application of the CAPM to estimate the return that investors require must be predicated on their expectations for the firm’s long-term risks and prospects. In applying the CAPM, Morningstar recognized that the cost of equity is a long-term cost of capital and the appropriate interest rate to use is a long-term bond yield:

The horizon of the chosen Treasury security should match the horizon of whatever is being valued. ... Note that the horizon is a function of the investment, not the investor. If an investor plans to hold a stock in a company for only five years, the yield on a five-year Treasury note would not be appropriate since the company will continue to exist beyond those five years. Morningstar, “Ibbotson SBBI, 2008 Valuation Yearbook,” at 59 (copy attached).

Accordingly, proper application of the CAPM should focus on long-term government bonds, with 30-year Treasury bonds representing the longest maturity available. Because the Treasury has not consistently issued 30-year bonds, historical studies, such as those published by Morningstar, often rely on 20-year Treasury bond yields. As discussed in his testimony, Dr. Avera did not rely on historical information to apply the CAPM, and he properly matched his estimated market rate of return with the 30-year Treasury bond yield, consistent with the long-term horizon of common stocks.

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN RETURN AND MARKET VALUE OF COMMON STOCKS*

Rolf W. BANZ

Northwestern University, Evanston, IL 60201, USA

Received June 1979, final version received September 1980

This study examines the empirical relationship between the return and the total market value of NYSE common stocks. It is found that smaller firms have had higher risk adjusted returns, on average, than larger firms. This 'size effect' has been in existence for at least forty years and is evidence that the capital asset pricing model is misspecified. The size effect is not linear in the market value; the main effect occurs for very small firms while there is little difference in return between average sized and large firms. It is not known whether size per se is responsible for the effect or whether size is just a proxy for one or more true unknown factors correlated with size.

1. Introduction

The single-period capital asset pricing model (henceforth CAPM) postulates a simple linear relationship between the expected return and the market risk of a security. While the results of direct tests have been inconclusive, recent evidence suggests the existence of additional factors which are relevant for asset pricing. Litzenberger and Ramaswamy (1979) show a significant positive relationship between dividend yield and return of common stocks for the 1936–1977 period. Basu (1977) finds that price–earnings ratios and risk adjusted returns are related. He chooses to interpret his findings as evidence of market inefficiency but as Ball (1978) points out, market efficiency tests are often joint tests of the efficient market hypothesis and a particular equilibrium relationship. Thus, some of the anomalies that have been attributed to a lack of market efficiency might well be the result of a misspecification of the pricing model.

This study contributes another piece to the emerging puzzle. It examines the relationship between the total market value of the common stock of a firm and its return. The results show that, in the 1936–1975 period, the common stock of small firms had, on average, higher risk-adjusted returns than a common stock of large firms. This result will henceforth be referred to as the 'size effect'. Since the results of the study are not based on a particular theoretical equilibrium model, it is not possible to determine conclusively whether market value per se matters or whether it is only a proxy for unknown true additional factors correlated with market value. The last section of this paper will address this question in greater detail.

*This study is based on part of my dissertation and was completed while I was at the University of Chicago. I wish to acknowledge the valuable comments of Bill Schwert on earlier drafts of this paper.

The various methods currently available for the type of empirical research presented in this study are discussed in section 2. Since there is a considerable amount of confusion about their relative merit, more than one technique is used. Section 3 discusses the data. The empirical results are presented in section 4. A discussion of the relationship between the size effect and other factors, as well as some speculative comments on possible explanations of the results, constitute section 5.

2. Methodologies

The empirical tests are based on a generalized asset pricing model which allows the expected return of a common stock to be a function of risk β and an additional factor ϕ , the market value of the equity.¹ A simple linear relationship of the form

$$E(R_i) = \gamma_0 + \gamma_1 \beta_i + \gamma_2 [(\phi_i - \phi_m) / \phi_m], \quad (1)$$ is assumed, where

- $E(R_i)$ = expected return on security i ,
- γ_0 = expected return on a zero-beta portfolio,
- γ_1 = expected market risk premium,
- ϕ_i = market value of security i ,
- ϕ_m = average market value, and
- γ_2 = constant measuring the contribution of ϕ_i to the expected return of a security.

If there is no relationship between ϕ_i and the expected return, i.e., $\gamma_2 = 0$, (1) reduces to the Black (1972) version of the CAPM.

Since expectations are not observable, the parameters in (1) must be estimated from historical data. Several methods are available for this purpose. They all involve the use of pooled cross-sectional and time series regressions to estimate γ_0 , γ_1 , and γ_2 . They differ primarily in (a) the assumption concerning the residual variance of the stock returns (homoscedastic or heteroscedastic in the cross-sectional), and (b) the treatment of the errors-in-variables problem introduced by the use of estimated betas in (1). All methods use a constrained optimization procedure, described in Fama (1976, ch. 9), to generate minimum variance (m.v.) portfolios with mean returns γ_i , $i=0, \dots, 2$. This imposes certain constraints on the portfolio weights, since from (1)

where the w_j are the portfolio proportions of each asset j , $j=1, \dots, N$. An examination of (2) shows that $\hat{\gamma}_0$ is the mean return of a standard m.v. portfolio ($\sum_j w_j = 1$) with zero beta and $\phi_p \equiv \sum_j w_j \phi_j = \phi_m$ [to make the second and third terms of the right-hand side of (2) vanish]. Similarly, $\hat{\gamma}_1$ is the mean return on a zero-investment m.v. portfolio with beta of one and $\phi_p = 0$, and $\hat{\gamma}_2$ is the mean return on a m.v. zero-investment, zero-beta portfolio with $\phi_p = \phi_m$. As shown by Fama (1976, ch. 9), this constrained optimization can be performed by running a cross-sectional regression of the form on a period-by-period basis, using estimated betas $\hat{\beta}_{it}$ and allowing for either homoscedastic or heteroscedastic error terms. Invoking the usual stationarity arguments the final estimates of the gammas are calculated as the averages of the T estimates.

One basic approach involves grouping individual securities into portfolios on the basis of market value and security beta, reestimating the relevant parameters (beta, residual variance) of the portfolios in a subsequent period, and finally performing either an ordinary least squares (OLS) regression [Fama and MacBeth (1973)] which assumes homoscedastic errors, or a generalized least squares (GLS) regression [Black and Scholes (1974)] which allows for heteroscedastic errors, on the portfolios in each time period.² Grouping reduces the errors-in-variables problem, but is not very efficient because it does not make use of all information. The errors-in-variables problem should not be a factor as long as the portfolios contain a reasonable number of securities.³

Litzenberger and Ramaswamy (1979) have suggested an alternative method which avoids grouping. They allow for heteroscedastic errors in the cross-section and use the estimates of the standard errors of the security ²Black and Scholes (1974) do not take account of heteroscedasticity, even though their method was designed to do so.

³Black, Jensen and Scholes (1972, p. 116).

betas estimates of the measurement errors. As Theil (1971, p. 610) has pointed out, this method leads to unbiased maximum likelihood estimators for the gammas as long as the error in the standard error of beta is small and the standard assumptions of the simple errors-in-variables model are met. Thus, it is very important that the diagonal model is the correct specification of the return-generating process, since the residual variance assumes a critical position in this procedure. The Litzenberger-Ramaswamy method is superior from a theoretical viewpoint; however, preliminary work has shown that it leads to serious problems when applied to the model of this study and is not pursued any further.⁴

Instead of estimating equation (3) with data for all securities, it is also possible to construct arbitrage portfolios containing stocks of very large and very small firms, by combining long positions in small firms with short positions in large firms. A simple time series regression is run to determine the difference in risk-adjusted returns between small and large firms. This approach, long familiar in the efficient markets and option pricing literature, has the advantage that no assumptions about the exact functional relationships between market value and expected return need to be made, and it will therefore be used in this study.

3. Data

The sample includes all common stocks quoted on the NYSE for at least five years between 1926 and 1975. Monthly price and return data and the number of shares outstanding at the end of each month are available in the monthly returns file of the Center for Research in Security Prices (CRSP) of the University of Chicago. Three different market indices are used; this is in response to Roll's (1977) critique of empirical tests of the CAPM. Two of the three are pure common stock indices — the CRSP equally- and value-weighted indices. The third is more comprehensive: a value-weighted combination of the CRSP value-weighted index and return data on corporate and government bonds from Ibbotson and Sinquefeld (1977) (henceforth 'market index').⁵ The weights of the components of this index are derived from information on the total market value of corporate and government bonds in various issues of the Survey of Current Business (updated annually) and from the market value of common stocks in the CRSP monthly index file. The stock indices, made up of riskier assets, have both higher returns and higher risk than the bond indices and the 'market index' time series of commercial paper returns is used as the risk-free rate.⁷ While not actually constant through time, its variation is very small when compared to that of the other series, and it is not significantly correlated with any of the three indices used as market proxies.

⁴If the diagonal model (or market model) is an incomplete specification of the return generating process, the estimate of the standard error of beta is likely to have an upward bias, since the residual variance estimate is too large. The error in the residual variance estimate appears to be related to the second factor. Therefore, the resulting gamma estimates are biased.

⁵No pretense is made that this index is complete; thus, the use of quotation marks. It ignores real estate, foreign assets, etc.; it should be considered a first step toward a comprehensive index. See Ibbotson and Fall (1979).

4. Empirical results

4.1. Results for methods based on grouped data

The portfolio selection procedure used in this study is identical to the one described at length in Black and Scholes (1974). The securities are assigned to one of twenty-five portfolios containing similar numbers of securities, first to one of five on the basis of the market value of the stock, then the securities in each of those five are in turn assigned to one of five portfolios on the basis of their beta. Five years of data are used for the estimation of the security beta; the next five years' data are used for the reestimation of the portfolio betas. Stock price and number of shares outstanding at the end of the five year periods are used for the calculation of the market proportions. The portfolios are updated every year. The cross-sectional regression (3) is then performed in each month and the means of the resulting time series of the gammas could be (and have been in the past) interpreted as the final estimators. However, having used estimated parameters, it is not certain that the series have the theoretical properties, in particular, the hypothesized beta. Black and Scholes (1974, p. 17) suggest that the time series of the gammas be regressed once more on the excess return of the market index. This correction involves running the time series regression (for $\hat{\gamma}_2$)

$$\hat{\gamma}_{2t} - R_{Ft} = \hat{\alpha}_2 + \hat{\beta}_2(R_{mt} - R_{Ft}) + \hat{\epsilon}_{2t} \quad (4)$$

It has been shown earlier that the theoretical β_2 is zero. (4) removes the effects of a non-zero β_2 on the return estimate $\hat{\gamma}_2$ and $\hat{\alpha}_2$ is used as the final estimator for $\hat{\gamma}_2 - R_{Ft}$. Similar corrections are performed for γ_0 and γ_1 . The ⁶Mean monthly returns and standard deviations for the 1926-1975 period are:

	Mean return	Standard deviation
'Market index'	0.0046	0.0178
CRSP value-weighted index	0.0085	0.0588
CRSP equally-weighted index	0.0120	0.0830
Government bond index	0.0027	0.0157
Corporate bond index	0.0032	0.0142

de. β_i s of the $\hat{\beta}_i$, $i=0, \dots, 2$, in (4) from their theoretical values also allow us to check whether the grouping procedure is an effective means to eliminate the errors-in-beta problem.

The results are essentially identical for both OLS and GLS and for all three indices. Thus, only one set of results, those for the 'market index' with GLS, is presented in table 1. For each of the gammas, three numbers are reported: the mean of that time series of returns which is relevant for the test of the hypothesis of interest (i.e., whether or not $\hat{\gamma}_0$ and $\hat{\gamma}_1$ are different from the risk-free rate and the risk premium, respectively), the associated t -statistic, and finally, the estimated beta of the time series of the gamma from (4). Note that the means are corrected for the deviation from the theoretical beta as discussed above.

The table shows a significantly negative estimate for γ_2 for the overall time period. Thus, shares of firms with large market values have had smaller returns, on average, than similar small firms. The CAPM appears to be misspecified. The table also shows that γ_0 is different from the risk-free rate. As both Fama (1976, ch. 9) and Roll (1977) have pointed out, if a test does not use the true market portfolio, the Sharpe-Lintner model might be wrongly rejected. The estimates for γ_0 are of the same magnitude as those reported by Fama and MacBeth (1973) and others. The choice of a market index and the econometric method does not affect the results. Thus, at least within the context of this study, the choice of a proxy for the market portfolio does not seem to affect the results and allowing for heteroscedastic disturbances does not lead to significantly more efficient estimators.

Before looking at the results in more detail, some comments on econometric problems are in order. The results in table 1 are based on the 'market index' which is likely to be superior to pure stock indices from a theoretical viewpoint since it includes more assets [Roll (1977)]. This superiority has its price. The actual betas of the time series of the gammas are reported in table 1 in the columns labeled $\hat{\beta}_i$. Recall that the theoretical values of β_0 and β_1 are zero and one, respectively. The standard zero-beta portfolio with return $\hat{\gamma}_0$ contains high beta stocks in short positions and low beta stocks in long positions, while the opposite is the case for the zero-investment portfolio with return $\hat{\gamma}_1$. The actual betas are all significantly different from the theoretical values. This suggests a regression effect, i.e., the past betas of high beta securities are overestimated and the betas of low beta securities are underestimated.⁸ Past beta is not completely uncorrelated with the error of the current beta and the instrumental variable approach to the error-in-variables problem is not entirely successful.⁹

⁸There is no such effect for β_2 because that portfolio has both zero beta and zero investment; i.e., net holdings of both high and low beta securities are, on average, zero.

⁹This result is first documented in Brenner (1976) who examines the original Fama-McBeth (1973) time series of $\hat{\gamma}_0$.

^a $\hat{\gamma}_0 - R_F$ = mean difference between return on zero beta portfolio and risk-free rate, $\hat{\gamma}_1 - (R_M - R_F)$ = mean difference between actual risk premium ($\hat{\gamma}_1$) and risk premium stipulated by Sharpe-Lintner model ($R_M - R_F$), $\hat{\gamma}_2$ = size premium, $\hat{\beta}_i$ = actual estimated market risk of $\hat{\gamma}_i$ (theoretical values: $\beta_0 = 0$, $\beta_1 = 1$, $\beta_2 = 0$); all $\hat{\beta}_0$, $\hat{\beta}_1$ are significantly different from the theoretical values. $t(\cdot)$ = t -statistic.

1. Deviations from the theoretical betas are largest for the 'market index' and smallest for the CRSP value-weighted index, and smallest for the CRSP equally-weighted index. This is due to two factors: first, even if the true covariance structure is stationary, betas with respect to a value-weighted index change whenever the weights change, since the weighted average of the betas is constrained to be equal to one. Second, the betas and their standard errors with respect to the 'market index' are much larger than for the stock indices (a typical stock beta is between two and three), which leads to larger deviations — a kind of 'leverage' effect. Thus, the results in table 1 show that the final correction for the deviation of $\hat{\beta}_0$ and $\hat{\beta}_1$ from their theoretical values is of crucial importance for market proxies with changing weights.

Estimated portfolio betas and portfolio market proportions are (negatively) correlated. It is therefore possible that the errors in beta induce an error in the coefficient of the market proportion. According to Levi (1973), the probability limit of $\hat{\gamma}_1$ in the standard errors-in-the-variables model is

$$\text{plim } \hat{\gamma}_1 = \gamma_1 / (1 + (\sigma_u^2 \cdot \sigma_2^2) / D) < \gamma_1,$$

with

$$D = (\sigma_1^2 + \sigma_u^2) \cdot \sigma_2^2 - \sigma_{12}^2 > 0,$$ where σ_1^2 , σ_2^2 are the variances of the true factors β and ϕ , respectively, σ_u^2 is the variance of the error in beta and σ_{12} is the covariance of β and ϕ . Thus, the bias in $\hat{\gamma}_1$ is unambiguously towards zero for positive γ_1 . The probability limit of $\hat{\gamma}_2 - \gamma_2$ is [Levi (1973)]

$$\text{plim } (\hat{\gamma}_2 - \gamma_2) = (\sigma_u^2 \cdot \sigma_{12} \cdot \gamma_1) / D.$$

We find that the bias in $\hat{\gamma}_2$ depends on the covariance between β and ϕ and the sign of γ_1 . If σ_{12} has the same sign as the covariance between β and ϕ , i.e., $\sigma_{12} < 0$, and if $\gamma_1 > 0$, then $\text{plim } (\hat{\gamma}_2 - \gamma_2) < 0$, i.e., $\text{plim } \hat{\gamma}_2 < \gamma_2$. If the grouping procedure is not successful in removing the error in beta, then it is likely that the reported $\hat{\gamma}_2$ overstates the true magnitude of the size effect. If this was a serious problem in this study, the results for the different market indices should reflect the problem. In particular, using the equally-weighted stock index should then lead to the smallest size effect since, as was pointed out earlier, the error in beta problem is apparently less serious for that kind of index. In fact, we find that there is little difference between the estimates.¹⁰

¹⁰For the overall time period, $\hat{\gamma}_2$ with the equally-weighted CRSP index is -0.00044 , with the value weighted CRSP index -0.00044 as well as opposed to the -0.00052 for the 'market index' reported in table 1. The estimated betas of $\hat{\gamma}_0$ and $\hat{\gamma}_1$ which reflect the degree of the error in beta problems are 0.07 and 0.91, respectively, for the equally-weighted CRSP index and 0.13 and 0.87 for the value-weighted CRSP index.

Thus, it does not appear that the size effect is just a proxy for the unobservable true beta even though the market proportion and the beta of securities are negatively correlated.

The correlation coefficient between the mean market values of the twenty-five portfolios and their betas is significantly negative, which might have introduced a multicollinearity problem. One of its possible consequences is coefficients that are very sensitive to addition or deletion of data. This effect does not appear to occur in this case: the results do not change significantly when five portfolios are dropped from the sample. Revising the grouping procedure — ranking on the basis of beta first, then ranking on the basis of market proportion — also does not lead to substantially different results.

4.2. A closer look at the results

An additional factor relevant for asset pricing — the market value of the equity of a firm — has been found. The results are based on a linear model. Linearity was assumed only for convenience and there is no theoretical reason (since there is no model) why the relationship should be linear. If it is nonlinear, the particular form of the relationship might give us a starting point for the discussion of possible causes of the size effect in the next section. An analysis of the residuals of the twenty-five portfolios is the easiest way to look at the linearity question. For each month t , the estimated residual return is calculated for all portfolios. The mean residuals over the forty-five year sample period are plotted as a function of the mean market proportion in fig. 1. Since the distribution of the market proportions is very skewed, a logarithmic scale is used. The solid line connects the mean residual returns of each size group. The numbers identify the individual portfolios within each group according to beta, '1' being the one with the largest beta, '5' being the one with the smallest beta.

The figure shows clearly that the linear model is misspecified.¹¹ The residuals are not randomly distributed around zero. The residuals of the portfolios containing the smallest firms are all positive; the remaining ones are close to zero. As a consequence, it is impossible to use $\hat{\gamma}_2$ as a simple size premium in the cross-section. The plot also shows, however, that the misspecification is not responsible for the significance of $\hat{\gamma}_2$ since the linear model underestimates the true size effect present for very small firms. To illustrate this point, the five portfolios containing the smaller firms are deleted from the sample and the parameters reestimated. The results summarized in table 2, show that the $\hat{\gamma}_2$ remain essentially the same. The relationship is still not linear; the new $\hat{\gamma}_2$ still cannot be used as a size premium.

Fig. 1 suggests that the main effect occurs for very small firms. Further support for this conclusion can be obtained from a simple test. We can regress the returns of the twenty-five portfolios in each result on beta alone and examine the residuals. The regression is misspecified and the residuals contain information about the size effect. Fig. 2 shows the plot of those residuals in the same format as fig. 1. The smallest firms have, on average, very large unexplained mean returns. There is no significant difference between the residuals of the remaining portfolios.

Fig. 1. Mean residual returns of portfolios (1936-1975) with equally-weighted CRSP index as market proxy. The residual is calculated with the three-factor model [eq. (3)]. The numbers 1, ..., 5 represent the mean residual return for the five portfolios within each size group (1: portfolio with largest beta, ..., 5: portfolio with smallest beta). + represents the mean of the mean residuals of the five portfolios with similar market values.

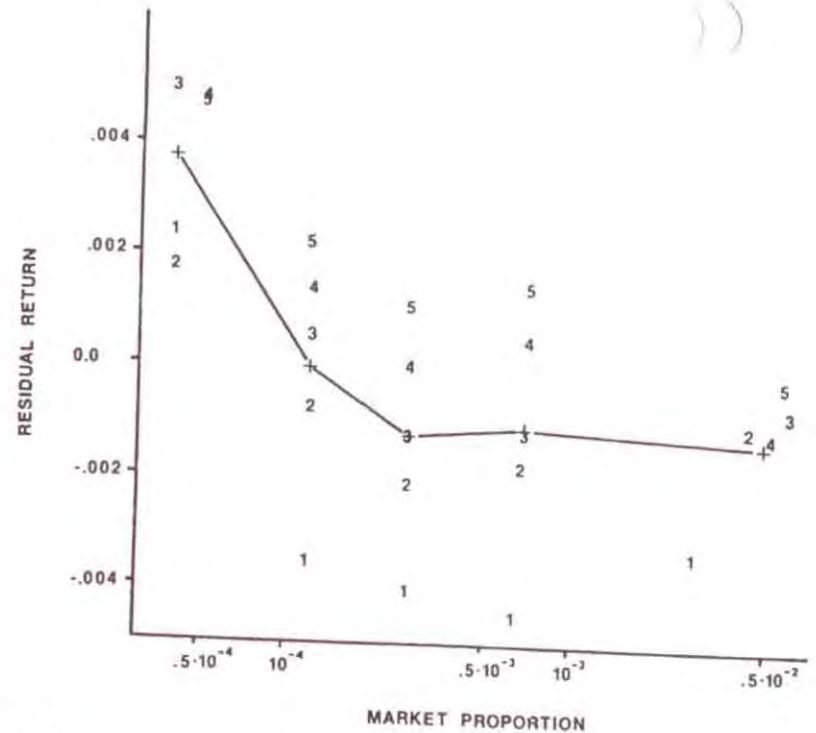

Fig. 2. Mean residual returns of portfolios (1936-1975) with equally-weighted CRSP index as market proxy. The residual is calculated with the two-factor model ($\hat{\epsilon}_{it} = R_{it} - \hat{\gamma}_{0i} - \hat{\gamma}_{1i}\hat{\beta}_{it}$). The symbols are as defined for fig. 1.

4.3. 'Arbitrage' portfolio returns

One important empirical question still remains: How important is the size effect from a practical point of view? Fig. 2 suggests that the difference in returns between the smallest firms and the remaining ones is, on average, about 0.4 percent per month. A more dramatic result can be obtained when the securities are chosen solely on the basis of their market value.

As an illustration, consider putting equal dollar amounts into portfolios containing the smallest, largest and median-sized firms at the beginning of a year. These portfolios are to be equally weighted and contain, say, ten, twenty or fifty securities. They are to be held for five years and are rebalanced every month. They are levered or unlevered to have the same beta. We are then interested in the differences in their returns, where R_{st} , R_{ar} and R_{lt} are the returns on the portfolios containing the smallest, median-sized and largest firms at portfolio formation time (and $R_{lt} = R_{2t} + R_{3t}$). The procedure involves (a) the calculation of the three differences in raw returns in each month and (b) running time series regressions of the differences on the excess returns of the market proxy. The intercept terms of these regressions are then interpreted as the \bar{R}_i , $i=1, \dots, 3$. Thus, the differences can be interpreted as 'arbitrage' returns, since, e.g., R_{lt} is the return obtained from holding the smallest firms long and the largest firms short, representing zero net investment in a zero-beta portfolio.¹² Simple equally weighted portfolios are used rather than more sophisticated minimum variance portfolios to demonstrate that the size effect is not due to some quirk in the covariance matrix.

Table 3 shows that the results of the earlier tests are fully confirmed. \bar{R}_2 , the difference in returns between very small firms and median-size firms, is typically considerably larger than \bar{R}_3 , the difference in returns between median-sized and very large firms. The average excess return from holding very small firms long and very large firms short is, on average, 1.52 percent per . . . or 19.8 percent on an annualized basis. This strategy, which suggests very large 'profit opportunities', leaves the investor with a poorly diversified portfolio. A portfolio of small firms has typically much larger residual risk with respect to a value-weighted index than a portfolio of very large firms with the same number of securities [Banz (1978, ch. 3)]. Since the fifty largest firms make up more than 25 percent of the total market value of NYSE stocks, it is not surprising that a larger part of the variation of the return of a portfolio of those large firms can be explained by its relation with the value-weighted market index. Table 3 also shows that the strategy would not have been successful in every five year subperiod. Nevertheless, the magnitude of the size effect during the past forty-five years is such that it is of more than just academic interest.

5. Conclusions

The evidence presented in this study suggests that the CAPM is misspecified. On average, small NYSE firms have had significantly larger risk adjusted returns than large NYSE firms over a forty year period. This size effect is not linear in the market proportion (or the log of the market proportion) but is most pronounced for the smallest firms in the sample. The effect is also not very stable through time. An analysis of the ten year subperiods show substantial differences in the magnitude of the coefficient of the size factor (table 1).

There is no theoretical foundation for such an effect. We do not even know whether the factor is size itself or whether size is just a proxy for one or more true but unknown factors correlated with size. It is possible, however, to offer some conjectures and even discuss some factors for which size is suspected to proxy. Recent work by Reinganum (1980) has eliminated one obvious candidate: the price-earnings (P/E) ratio.¹³ He finds that the P/E -effect, as reported by Basu (1977), disappears for both NYSE and AMEX stocks when he controls for size but that there is a significant size effect even when he controls for the P/E -ratio, i.e., the P/E -ratio effect is a proxy for the size effect and not vice versa. Stattman (1980), who found a significant negative relationship between the ratio of book value and market value of equity and its return, also reports that this relationship is just a proxy for the size effect. Naturally, a large number of possible factors remain to be tested.¹⁴ But the Reinganum results point out a potential problem with some of the existing negative evidence of the efficient market hypothesis. Basu believed to have identified a market inefficiency but his P/E -effect is just a proxy for the size effect. Given its longevity, it is likely that it is due to a market inefficiency but it is rather evidence of a pricing model misspecification. To the extent that tests of market efficiency use data of firms of different sizes and are based on the CAPM, their results might be at least contaminated by the size effect.

¹³The average correlation coefficient between P/E -ratio and market value is only 0.16 for individual stocks for thirty-eight quarters ending in 1978. But for the portfolios formed on the basis of P/E -ratio, it rises to 0.82. Recall that Basu (1977) used ten portfolios in his study.

¹⁴E.g., debt-equity ratios, skewness of the return distribution [Kraus and Litzenberger (1976)].

One possible explanation involving the size of the firm directly is based on a model by Klein and Bawa (1977). They find that if insufficient information is available about a subset of securities, investors will not hold these securities because of estimation risk, i.e., uncertainty about the true parameters of the return distribution. If investors differ in the amount of information available, they will limit their diversification to different subsets of all securities in the market.¹⁵ It is likely that the amount of information generated is related to the size of the firm. Therefore, many investors would not desire to hold the common stock of very small firms. I have shown elsewhere [Banz (1978, ch. 2)] that securities sought by only a subset of the investors have higher risk-adjusted returns than those considered by all investors. Thus, lack of information about small firms leads to limited diversification and therefore to higher returns for the 'undesirable' stocks of small firms.¹⁶ While this informal model is consistent with the empirical results, it is, nevertheless, just conjecture.

To summarize, the size effect exists but it is not at all clear why it exists. Until we find an answer, it should be interpreted with caution. It might be tempting to use the size effect, e.g., as the basis for a theory of mergers — large firms are able to pay a premium for the stock of small firms since they will be able to discount the same cash flows at a smaller discount rate. Naturally, this might turn out to be complete nonsense if size were to be shown to be just a proxy.

The preceding discussion suggests that the results of this study leave many questions unanswered. Further research should consider the relationship between size and other factors such as the dividend yield effect, and the tests should be expanded to include OTC stocks as well.

¹⁵Klein and Bawa (1977, p. 102).

¹⁶A similar result can be obtained with the introduction of fixed holding costs which lead to limited diversification as well. See Brennan (1975), Banz (1978, ch. 2) and Mayshar (1979).

However, an estimate of each of the above three variables must be formed. Like all components of the cost of capital, these variables should be measured on a forward-looking basis. Chapters 5 and 6 are devoted to estimating the equity risk premium and beta, respectively. Factors to consider in estimating the riskless rate are covered below.

Risk-Free Rate

The CAPM implicitly assumes the presence of a single riskless asset, that is, an asset perceived by all investors as having no risk. A common choice for the nominal riskless rate is the yield on a U.S. Treasury security. The ability of the U.S. government to create money to fulfill its debt obligations under virtually any scenario makes U.S. Treasury securities practically default-free. While interest rate changes cause government obligations to fluctuate in price, investors face essentially no default risk as to either coupon payment or return of principal.

The horizon of the chosen Treasury security should match the horizon of whatever is being valued. When valuing a business that is being treated as a going concern, the appropriate Treasury yield should be that of a long-term Treasury bond. Note that the horizon is a function of the investment, not the investor. If an investor plans to hold stock in a company for only five years, the yield on a five-year Treasury note would not be appropriate since the company will continue to exist beyond those five years.

In February of 1977 the Treasury began to issue 30-year Treasury securities. Prior to this date, the longest-term Treasury security was 20 years, which was the standard Ibbotson used for its data series. To remain consistent with Ibbotson's historical data series, the Ibbotson® Stocks, Bonds, Bills, and Inflation® Classic Yearbook continued to base the yield for its long-term government bond on one with close to 20 years to maturity. Bonds with at least 20 years to maturity continued to trade and, therefore, a proxy for the yield on 20-year Treasury securities was readily available. In October of 2001 the U.S. Treasury announced that it would no longer issue 30-year Treasury bonds and the 10-year bond became the longest term Treasury security offered; in 2005 this decision was reversed, and the U.S. Treasury resumed issuing 30-year Treasury bonds in February of 2006. Throughout this period Ibbotson continued (and continues) to use the 20-year yield for data-consistency purposes. Presently, differences in the yields of the currently available long-term instruments tend to be relatively small. Table 4-1 shows the current yields for several different horizons.

Current Yields or Expected Riskless Rates

	Yield (Riskless Rate)*
Long-Term (20-year) U.S. Treasury Coupon Bond Yield	4.5%
Long-Term (10-year) U.S. Treasury Coupon Bond Yield	4.0%
Intermediate-Term (5-year) U.S. Treasury Coupon Note Yield	3.3%
Short-term (30-day) U.S. Treasury Bill Yield	2.8%

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 68

Responding Witness: William E. Avera

- Q-68. Refer to the Avera Testimony, pages 47 and 48. The discussion regarding the use of historical information in the Capital Asset Pricing Model ("CAPM") ROE calculations and footnote 47 seems to suggest that the use of CAPM is inappropriate in today's financial climate. Explain whether KU is recommending that the CAPM derived ROE results not be considered, even though a CAPM analysis is part of the testimony.
- A-68. Dr. Avera's testimony does indicate that the use of historical information in the CAPM is not appropriate because it violates the requirements of this approach, which is predicated on forward-looking estimates, and not on backward-looking returns. In addition, Dr. Avera's testimony explains why reliance on historical information is further compromised by current conditions in financial markets, which violate the assumptions of a static risk premium between common stocks and government bonds.

Because Dr. Avera's application of the CAPM was based only on forward-looking expectations, and not on historical relationships, it does not suffer from these infirmities. As a result, Dr. Avera properly considered the results of his application of the CAPM method in his evaluation of a fair ROE for KU.

Question No. 70

Responding Witness: William E. Avera

- Q-70. Refer to the Avera Testimony, page 71. Provide the trackers approved and currently in use for each proxy group company.
- A-70. Dr. Avera has not conducted a detailed research study of the individual tariffs to identify the trackers and other adjustment mechanisms currently in use for all of the utilities included in the Combination Utility Group. Please see the attached, which was based on Dr. Avera's review of Form 10-K Reports, and supports his testimony at page 71 that the utilities in the Combination Utility Group operate under a wide variety of cost adjustment mechanisms.

Question No. 72

Responding Witness: Lonnie E. Bellar

- Q-72. Refer to the Bellar Testimony at pages 8–11 wherein he discusses the proposed changes to the CSR tariffs.
- a. State whether KU has discussed the proposed changes with its three CSR customers. If so, provide the customers' responses.
 - b. Mr. Bellar provides recent PJM demand response auction prices on page 11 and states that the proposed CSR credits "strike a reasonable balance between capacity-market prices and the desire to encourage demand response." State whether KU believes that physical curtailments are necessary usually during high usage times when market prices would be at higher peak prices. If no, explain.
 - c. Mr. Bellar states on page 11 that KU proposes to eliminate the "system reliability event" restriction on its ability to request a physical curtailment. State when would a physical curtailment be needed absent a system reliability event.
- A-72.
- a. KU's customer service representatives directly communicated the proposed changes to the customers that would be impacted at the time the rate case was being filed. Generally, customers' reactions included concern about the financial impact and an awareness of market conditions that caused KU to change rates.
 - b. Considering physical curtailments in KU's CSR tariffs are limited with respect to annual hours of usage, physical curtailments would generally be necessary during times of high usage which usually results in relatively high market peak prices.
 - c. Outside of a system reliability event in which physical curtailment would be necessary, the Company can choose to physically curtail load under the provisions of the proposed CSR rider anytime the economic benefit of curtailment would be greater than the marginal cost of production utilizing another resource, typically this would be a combustion turbine or a market purchase.

Question No. 73

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-73. Refer to the Testimony of Robert M. Conroy ("Conroy Testimony") at pages 3-4 wherein Mr. Conroy discusses the proposed change to the fuel adjustment clause ("FAC") calculation related to the calculation of system losses. State whether KU's FAC calculation was purposely set up to jurisdictionalize the system losses or if the system losses have been jurisdictionalized in error since the FAC was established.
- A-73. KU modified its determination of FAC-included system losses in 1999 in response to the Commission's July 15, 1999 Order in Cases No. 94-461-A, 94-461-B, 94-461-C and 96-523. In that Order, the Commission stated that "KU should use the overall system losses based on 12 months to date information" in the FAC monthly filings. KU's research indicates that since that time, KU has been using losses related to the Kentucky system only.

Question No. 74

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-74. In Case No. 2012-00222, LG&E is proposing an adjustment to revenues and expenses concerning the FAC and the inclusion of Interchange In energy as a component of Sales. Explain why a similar adjustment is not being proposed for KU.
- A-74. See Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.03, and Conroy Exhibit P3 for the proposed revenue and expense adjustments related to KU's proposed modification to the FAC. KU is not proposing a modification related to Interchange because KU's FAC has included Interchange as a component of purchases. The proposal made by LG&E seeks to treat Interchange consistently between the two Companies' FAC.

- A-75. All workpapers are being provided in electronic format with formulas intact, in the original "as filed" versions and in "revised" versions, as appropriate. Revised files are clearly identified as such. The Company is also providing an index identifying the various Excel files. Certain information requested is confidential and proprietary, and is being provided under seal pursuant to a petition for confidential treatment.

Question No. 76

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-76. Refer to the Conroy Testimony at page 14 wherein Mr. Conroy states that "KU continues to use the same spreadsheet models developed and utilized in the prior base rate proceedings to perform the cost of service study." State whether this statement indicates that all revenue and expense amounts in the cost of service study filed in this proceeding have been allocated using the same allocation factors as used in the prior base rate proceeding. If no, provide the changes in the allocation factors and reasons for the changes.
- A-76. The cost of service study spreadsheet model used by KU in this proceeding is the same model used in the prior proceedings in that no substantive changes to the structure or layout of the model have been performed. Subsequently, the allocation of revenue and expenses are the same as the prior rate proceeding with the exception of the energy and demand allocations in the KU COSS. These allocators were adjusted to reflect the effect of rate switching for each customer class. Those adjustments can be found on pages 35 – 36 on Conroy Exhibit C4. While the results of the allocations are necessarily different, the methods used are consistent between the two studies.

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 77

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-77. Refer to page 20 of the Conroy Testimony. Mr. Conroy states that allocation factors YECust05 and YECust06 were used to allocate plant costs associated with meter reading, billing costs, and customer service expenses on the basis of a customer weighting factor based on discussions with KU's meter reading, billing and customer service departments.
- a. Explain how these discussions were used to determine the allocation factors.
 - b. Provide examples of questions asked and how the answers were used to calculate the factors.
- A-77. a. YECust05 allocates the Customer Accounts and Customer Service components of Net Cost Rate Base to rate classes. The basis of the discussions was to gain an understanding of the relative effort required to provide service to each of the customer classes.
- b. Billing Integrity specialists were asked to evaluate, relative to the Residential Class, proportionally how much more time or expense is involved to bill other rate classes, or to provide billing information about other rate classes. For example, the more billing components a rate utilizes (i.e., kWh or both kWh and kW), a proportionally greater the weighting is assigned to the rate. In addition, rates billed with a kVA component (i.e. TODP or RTS) require meter reading pulse data to be extracted and interpreted by MV90 analysts in addition to the review by billing specialists; therefore, the weighting is increased.

Question No. 78

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-78. Refer to the Conroy Testimony at page 38 wherein he discusses the proposal to eliminate the Load Reduction Rider. Mr. Conroy states that there have been no customers requesting to participate in the rider since it was made a permanent tariff. State whether there were participating customers when it was a pilot program. If yes, provide the number who participated and the reasons they are no longer participating.
- A-78. At the time that KU requested that the program be made permanent in May 2006, one customer with two contracts was a participant, and those contracts remain in effect. However, the customer has never been asked to reduce load under the terms of the contract. Given current market conditions and the terms of the LRI contract, it is not economical for the Company to request load reduction under LRI. Additionally, the Company believes that other rate incentives, such as Rider CSR, NMS SQF or LQF, make the LRI redundant and unnecessary.

Question No. 79

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-79. Refer to the Conroy Testimony at pages 40-43 wherein he describes how the proposed increases in the Redundant Capacity charges and Supplemental/Standby Service charges were calculated. State whether the methodology used to calculate the increases is the same as that used in prior base rate proceedings. If no, provide and explain the differences.

A-79. The methodology used to calculate the increase in the Redundant Capacity charges is the same as that used in prior base rate proceedings.

Supplemental/Standby Service charges had previously been adjusted based on the proposed changes to demand charges. In this case, however, KU used cost-based charges for each proposed delivery level.

Question No. 80

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-80. Refer to pages 44-45 of the Conroy Testimony. Mr. Conroy states that no customers have ever participated in its Real Time Pricing tariff, that the availability to participate is limited to those having done so by November 31, 2010, and that KU proposes to eliminate the tariff. State whether KU incurs any costs to keep the tariff active. If yes, provide a breakdown of the costs. If no, explain why KU is not requesting a change to the availability section of the tariff so that customers may participate which would enable KU to provide additional tariff options to its customers.
- A-80. There are de minimis costs associated with maintaining Standard Rate Rider RTP. KU proposes to eliminate due to lack of customer response rather than alter its availability in this proceeding. The Company is continuing to evaluate new approaches to real-time pricing options for customers.

Question No. 81

Responding Witness: Cheryl E. Bruner / Robert M. Conroy

- Q-81. Refer to Conroy Exhibit P1, page 3 of 18. This page shows that there are no customers on Low Emission Vehicle tariff. Describe the efforts KU has made in advertising this rate to its customers.
- A-81. Since the filing of the Conroy testimony, two KU customers elected to be served under rate LEV. KU ran the following article in Power Source which is included with bill inserts in April 2011.

There is also a web page that discusses electric vehicles (<http://www.lge-ku.com/ev/default.asp>). Below is a screen shot of it.

Exploring the Open Road to Electric Vehicles

The concept of electric vehicles may seem new to many people, but did you know the first electric vehicle was built in 1830? In 1900, nearly 40 percent of all vehicles were powered by electricity, a trend that continued for 20 years. That's when production of electric vehicles stopped. While the electric vehicle isn't new by any means, there is certainly a renewed interest among consumers, the auto industry and, as you can imagine, the electric utility industry.

We, at LG&E and KU, have actively followed the movement, and we've celebrated as each of the top vehicle manufacturers announced plans to make an electric model available to consumers.

Our industry has committed itself to helping speed the introduction and widespread adoption of plug-in electric vehicles (PEVs). By doing so, we can achieve our objective to move our country toward a greener and more energy-efficient economy. Working with the Edison Electric Institute \(EEI\), the electric utility industry has identified the following critical aspects for PEV success.

- Infrastructure
- Customer Support
- Education
- Incentives
- Utility Fleets

Question No. 82

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-82. Refer to Conroy Exhibit P5. Explain why KU is using an adjustment for customer switching to calculate Actual kWh in column (4) in its Adjustment to Reflect Year End Number of Customers, and whether the level of rate switching experienced during the test year is significantly greater than in the past.
- A-82. KU calculated Actual kWh adjusted for rate switching in order to match the kWh to the customer count. If KU had adjusted only the customer count for rate switching, and not the corresponding kWh, the calculation of the average kWh per Customer per Year would be based on energy consumption by customers that had not been on the rate for 13 months, resulting in a misstated average calculation. KU's ability to track customers that have switched rates during the year is enhanced due to the reporting capabilities of the Customer Care System database.

Question No. 83

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-83. Refer to Conroy Exhibit P5, page 3 of 7.

- a. Customers 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, and 17 are shown as being "New in June 2011". However, the "Customer Months" in column 2 are shown as something other than "10" which would be the remaining months in the test year for a new June 2011 customer. Explain the amounts in the "Customer Months" column for those customers.
- b. Customer 15 is shown as being "New in July 2011". However, the "Customer Months" in column 2 is shown as something other than "9" which would be the remaining months in the test year for a new July 2011 customer. Explain the amount in the "Customer Months" column for this customer.

A-83.a.b. The "New in June 2011" and "New in July 2011" were inadvertent pasted values. The correct months the customers joined the KU system are as follows:

Customer 11: July 2011
Customer 12: September 2011
Customer 13: January 2012
Customer 14: January 2012
Customer 15: February 2012

Q-84. Refer to Conroy Exhibit P5.

- a. Refer to page 6 of 7. Column (4) is calculated by subtracting column (2) from, and adding column (3) to, column (1). Explain whether this results in column (4) representing a pre-switching rather than post-switching customer count. If yes, explain why the year-end customer adjustment should be calculated using a pre-switching count. If not, explain. If a correction is necessary, provide a revised Exhibit P5 and revisions of all exhibits that would be affected by this change.
- b. Likewise, if column (8) represents a pre-switching as opposed to post-switching energy usage, explain why this is correct. If any corrections are necessary, provide revisions to Exhibit P5 and all affected exhibits.

A-84. a. The amounts in Column 1 were incorrect. See the response to Question No. 75 for the revised exhibit. No additional exhibits are affected by the revision.

- b. The amounts in Column 5 were incorrect. See response to a.

- Q-85. Refer to Conroy Exhibit C1.
- a. Explain how the minimum system demand figure was calculated or whether it is simply the low point on the system load curve.
 - b. Explain how the winter and summer peak hours are calculated.
 - c. This exhibit provides the application of the modified BIP methodology which is based on combined system results for KU and LG&E. Provide the information presented in Conroy Exhibit C1 for the KU and LG&E systems individually.
- A-85.
- a. The minimum system demand figure represents the lowest hourly total system demand recorded by the combined LG&E and KU system during the test year. This was calculated by finding the minimum or lowest hourly total system load served from the LG&E and KU via the hourly EMS system.
 - b. The summer peak hour represents the highest hourly total system demand recorded during the months of May through September and the winter peak hour represents the highest hourly total system demanded recorded during the months of October through April.
 - c. See attached.

Q-86. Refer to Conroy Exhibit C3.

- a. Refer to pages 17-20 of 52. Explain the reasoning for using the PROFIX functional vector for accounts 551, 553, and 554.
- b. Refer to pages 49-52 of 52. Explain in detail how each of the following functional vectors was calculated: F015, F019, F020, F021, F022, F023, F024, and F027.

A-86. a. The PROFIX functional vector is a fixed production cost allocator and accounts 551, 553, and 554 are fixed cost production maintenance accounts.

- b. F015 is a carryover from a previous study that is not used.

F019 is the sum of labor expenses charged to steam operation accounts 501, 502, 505, 506, and 507. F019 is used to allocate account 500 labor.

F020 is the sum of labor expenses charged to steam maintenance accounts 511, 512, 513, and 514. F020 is used to allocate account 510 labor.

F021 is the sum of labor expenses charged to hydro operation accounts 536, 537, 538, 539, and 540. F021 is used to allocate account 535 labor.

F022 is the sum of labor expenses charged to hydro maintenance accounts 542, 543, 544, and 545. F022 is used to allocate account 541 labor.

F023 is the sum of labor expenses charged to distribution operation accounts 581 through 589. F023 is used to allocate account 580 labor.

F024 is the sum of labor expenses charged to distribution maintenance accounts 591 through 598. F024 is used to allocation account 590 labor.

F027 is the sum of distribution plant accounts 364, 365, 366, and 367. F027 is used to allocate customer advances.

- Q-87. Refer to Conroy Exhibit C4, pages 23-24 of 38, the Operating Revenues section.
- a. Explain where the first row of numbers on these pages, the Sales amounts by rate class, can be found in either Conroy Exhibit R4 or R5. If they cannot be found in those exhibits, explain how they were calculated.
 - b. Explain why the rows for "Franchise Fees and HEA" and "Other Accrued Revenue" are blank.
- A-87.
- a. Sales amounts by rate class is the sum of billing determinant revenues net of CSR and HEA, miscellaneous revenue adjustments, and unbilled and accrued revenues not included in billing determinant revenues. See pages 35-36 of 38. The sum of these amounts agrees to jurisdictional sales to ultimate customers as shown on Conroy Exhibit C2, page 9 of 29, rows 1-8.
 - b. Franchise Fees and HEA are not considered revenue since the amounts are collected by the Company on behalf of third parties. Other Accrued Revenue is included in Sales. See response to part a.

- a. Explain how the FAC01 allocation vector was calculated.
 - b. Explain why, for the row "Annualize FAC roll-in to base rates", the amount in the "Residential Rate RS" column should not equal $1,007,423 which is the difference between the $2,112,852 amount in the "Total 12 Mos. Ended" column for the Residential Rate on Conroy Exhibit P2, page 3 of 3, and the ($1,105,429) in the "Increased Revenue" column for the Residential Rate RS on Conroy Exhibit P1, page 1 of 18.
 - c. Explain why the individual class allocations for the "Year end adjustment" on these pages do not reconcile with those on Conroy Exhibit P5, page 1 of 7.
 - d. KU uses the allocation vector FAC01 to allocate the "Annualize FAC roll-in to base rates" and "Adjustment to reflect changes to FAC calculations" pro-forma adjustments to the rate classes. In Case No. 2012-00222, LG&E used the allocation vector REV01 for the same pro-forma adjustments. Explain the reason for the use of different allocation vectors between the companies.
- A-88.
- a. The allocation vector FAC01 is the change in base rates due to the FAC roll-in from Conroy Exhibit P-1.
 - b. "Annualized FAC roll-in to base rates" is the net difference in revenues and expenses as calculated on Blake Exhibit 1, Schedule 1.02. This amount is allocated to each rate class on the basis of the calculated difference in FAC revenues on Conroy Exhibit P2, page 3 of 3.
 - c. The "Year end adjustment" amounts on pages 27-28 are calculated based on inputs found on pages 37-38, which represent a slightly different adjustment result that was inadvertently not updated in the final version of the study.

- d. The two allocators are the same; the naming convention was not synchronized between the two models.

Question No. 89

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-89. Refer to Conroy Exhibit C4, pages 33-34. Explain why the "Proposed Increase" amounts on these pages for the PS-Primary, TOD Primary, and FLS-Transmission classes do not reconcile with the "Increase" amounts shown for those classes on Conroy Exhibit R4, page 3 of 3.
- A-89. The "Increase" amounts on Conroy Exhibit R4, page 3 of 3, are the calculated base rate increases at proposed rates. The Proposed Increase to Ultimate Consumers on Conroy Exhibit C4, pages 33-34 include the effect of the proposed change to the CSR credits.

Question No. 91

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-91. Refer to Conroy Exhibit C5, page 5 of 5, and Exhibit C6, page 5 of 5. Explain the basis for the allocation of 85 percent to Primary and 15 percent to Secondary.
- A-91. The allocation of overhead and underground conductor between primary and secondary is based on conductor miles installed for each voltage level.

Question No. 92

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-92. Refer to Conroy Exhibit R4.
- a. State where on this schedule, and in what USoA account, revenue from all riders is recorded.
 - b. Refer to page 1 of 3.
 - (1) Provide a reconciliation of the $1,319,060,381 Total Jurisdictional "Revenue Adjusted to as Billed Basis" on this page to the $1,342,076,920 Jurisdictional "Operating Revenues" on Blake Exhibit 1, page 1 of 3.
 - (2) Explain why the Total Jurisdictional "Adjustment to Remove Fuel Adjustment Clause Billings" of $9,300,699 does not reconcile with the $9,342,991 shown in last column on Conroy Exhibit P2, page 1 of 3.
 - c. Refer to page 2 of 3.
 - (1) Explain how amounts in the "Adjustment to Reflect Removal of Base Rate ECR Revenues" column were calculated and how they relate to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.04.
 - (2) Explain how the amounts in the "Adjustment to Reflect Elimination of ECR Plans" column were calculated and how they relate to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.04.
- A-92. a. CSR revenue credits are shown on Conroy Exhibit R4 as a rate category in the left-most column. Net metering revenues are included with Rates RS and GS as appropriate. Redundant capacity revenue is a component of demand revenues and is included with the appropriate rate categories. Kilowatt-hours consumed by lighting units is used to calculate FAC revenues; FAC revenues are shown on Exhibit R4 in the second column. Green energy receipts and SQF purchases are not shown on Conroy Exhibit R4.

- b-(2) Conroy Exhibit P2, page 1 of 3 recalculates the FAC revenues by multiplying billing determinants kWh by the FAC billing factor in effect for each month. Conroy Exhibit R4 reports the actual FAC revenue collected from retail customers for each month. The difference in the two amounts is due to rebilling when the FAC rebilled amount uses the FAC factor applicable to the month being rebilled.
- c-(1) The removal of ECR base revenues on Conroy Exhibit R4, page 2 of 3 was calculated by applying the current base ECR component of each rate to the applicable ECR billing determinants for the test year. Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.04 removes actual test year ECR base revenues, which were collected at two different base components due to the ECR roll-in that occurred in the test year.
- c-(2) KU calculated a proposed base ECR component using the same methodology used in Case No. 2011-00231. The 2009 Plan portion of the approved roll-in, $5,146,303, was used to develop base rate components using the billing determinants and methodology approved by the Commission in the ECR 2-year review. The base rate components related to the rolled in 2009 Plan were applied to test year billing determinants to develop, by rate class, the portion of test year base rate revenue associated with the 2009 Plan. Then, KU subtracted the base rate revenue associated with the 2009 Plan from total base revenue associated with all ECR Plans. The result of this final step is the Adjustment to Reflect Elimination of ECR Plans on Conroy Exhibit R4, page 2 of 3.

Case No. 2012-00221

Question No. 93

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-93. Refer to Conroy Exhibit R5.
- a. Refer to page 1 of 16. Explain the reason for the 433 and 1,366 that appear in lower half of the page under the "Present Rates" column and how they are used in the calculations.
 - b. Refer to page 9 of 16. Explain why the $500 shown under the "Calculated Revenue at Present Rates" column for "Prorated and corrected basic service charge billings" does not appear in the "Calculated Revenue at Proposed Rates" column.
 - c. Refer to page 13 of 16. KU is proposing an increase of 14.73 percent for the "9,500L Contemp Décor UG RC-484" light, a 20 percent increase for the "22,000L Contemp Décor UG RC-485" light, and a 15.6 percent increase for the "50,000L Contemp Décor UG RC-486" light. The average increase for the lighting classes is 5.41 percent. Explain the reason for the proposed higher increases to the three referenced lights.
 - d. Refer to page 15 of 16. KU is proposing an increase of 55 percent for the "20,000L MV Special Lighting RC-408" light. The average increase for the lighting classes is 5.41 percent.
 - (1) Explain the reason for the proposed higher increase for this light and how an increase of this magnitude satisfies the principal of gradualism.
 - (2) State the number of customers that would be affected by this proposal. Include in your response the largest number of these lights billed to a single customer.
- A-93. a. The amounts are a calculation of the average energy used by the customers that switched rates. The amounts are not used and should have been deleted from the exhibit prior to submittal.

- b. This amount is the 13th basic service charge assessed due to the change from billing cycle 1 to billing cycle 20. Because the amount is removed in Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 11 (see response to Question No. 48), it was not included in Calculated Revenue at Proposed Rates.
- c. “9500L Contemp Décor UG RC-484” is being combined with “9,500L Contemporary HPS UG RC-477.” KU calculated its proposed rate for the combined lighting category using a weighted average of the total test year revenue for the two lights divided by the total number of lights in the two categories, multiplied by the average proposed revenue increase for Rate LS.

“22,000L Contemp Décor UG RC-485” is being combined with “22,000L Contemporary HPS UG RC-478” and the proposed rate was calculated in the manner described above.

Likewise, “50,000L Contemp Décor UG RC-486” is being combined with “50,000L Contemporary HPS UG RC-479” and the proposed rate was also calculated in the manner described above.

- d-(1) See the response to part c above; the higher percentage increase is the result of a weighted average calculation. This light is the same type of light as the “20,000 Lumen MV Std RC-448” light, but with fewer installations.
- d-(2) In March 2012, KU billed 111 of its customers for this light. The largest number of lights billed to a single customer was 26.

Question No. 94

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-94. Refer to Conroy Exhibit M4, page 1 of 3.
- a. State whether the installed costs shown on this schedule are gross or net investment costs. If gross costs, explain why net costs were not used.
 - b. In KU's most recent rate proceeding, Case No. 2009-00548, the calculation of the CATV attachment charges included a two-user pole cost as well as a three user pole cost. Explain why only a three user pole cost is included in the calculation in this proceeding.
- A-94.
- a. Consistent with the use of a levelized carrying charge rate – as opposed to a non-levelized carrying charge rate – the installed cost figures represent gross plant in service values.
 - b. Prior to the most recent KU rate proceeding, Case No. 2009-00548, KU charged a different monthly rate for 2 user pole attachments and 3 user pole attachments. As a part of the settlement stipulation in the previous case, KU was granted a single pole attachment charge of $5.40 per attachment per year, thus eliminating the annual charge difference between two user and three user pole attachments. Since KU currently charges that single rate, a single rate was calculated based upon the three user pole attachment usage space factor of 0.0759 as shown on Conroy Exhibit M5, page 1 of 3. This usage factor was chosen as it is more conservative than the two user pole attachment usage space factor of 0.1224, thus resulting in a lower per unit rate for pole attachment customers.

Question No. 95

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-95. Refer to Conroy Exhibit M6. Provide a breakdown which details the costs incurred for labor, transportation, supplies, and equipment.

A-95. See the table below.

Disconnect Service	$	14.69
Reconnect Service		14.69
Total Charge	$	29.37

Based on average cost per credit order. ($14.69) Cost per credit order consist of labor, transportation, supplies, and equipment. Front and back office service order processing expenses are not included.

Labor	$	12.00
Transportation	$	2.29
Supplies	$	0.24
Equipment	$	0.16
	$	14.69
