Response to Commission Staff's Second Request For Information
Dated July 31, 2012

Case No. 2012-00222

Question No. 63

Responding Witness: Lonnie E. Bellar

- Q-63. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.09, and page 10 of the Testimony of Lonnie E. Bellar ("Bellar Testimony").
- a. Explain why the last three months of the test year were selected to form the basis for the proposed adjustment of off-system sales margins as opposed, for example, to the last four months or the last six months.
  - b. Provide the kWh sales level for the first quarter of 2012 that resulted in off-system sales margins of $209,249 shown on line 1 of Reference Schedule 1.09.
  - c. On a quarterly basis, for calendar years 2007 through 2011 provide LG&E's level of off-system sales in kWh and the resulting off-system sales margins.
- A-63.
- a. As discussed in Testimony of Paul W. Thompson on pages 13-16, primarily due to decreased natural gas prices and the weak economy, off-system sales margins have declined significantly. Using the most recent actual data was selected because it reflects a known and measurable level of OSS margins that can be reasonably achieved to establish rates in this case. As indicated in my testimony, the Company is providing monthly updates to the off-system sales margin adjustment (Reference Schedule 1.09) to reflect the most recent actual data. See the response to Question No. 81.
  - b. 128,331,000 kWh
  - c. See attached.

The attachment is being provided in a separate file in Excel format.

Response to Commission Staff's Second Request For Information
Dated July 31, 2012

Case No. 2012-00222

Question No. 64

Responding Witness: Shannon L. Charnas

- Q-64. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.12, page III-9 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E to the Direct Testimony of John J. Spanos ("Spanos Testimony") and page 4 of the Testimony of Shannon L. Charnas ("Charnas Testimony").
- a. The amount of total annualized electric depreciation expense on line 4 of Reference Schedule 1.12 is $126,313,767, which compares to $112,892,722, the total amount shown on page III-12 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E. Describe in detail the reasons for this difference.
  - b. Based on test year end plant in service, provide a schedule at the same sub-account level as on page III-12 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E, which shows the derivation of the annualized electric depreciation expense amount on line 4 of Reference Schedule 1.12.
  - c. Provide a detailed description of the "assets set up for retirement obligations" referenced on line 18 of the Charnas Testimony, which result in the amount of $2,206,653 shown on line 6 of Reference Schedule 1.12.
- A-64. a. Schedule 1.12 line 4 reflects the allocation of 71% of common plant to electric plant. This allocation of common plant and the additional plant added between December 31, 2011, the end of the period covered in Mr. Spanos' depreciation study, and March 31, 2012, the end of the filed test year, account for the difference.
- b. See attached.
  - c. The "assets set up for retirement obligations" ("ARO") are the asset retirement costs established upon initial recognition of the liabilities for the asset retirement obligations. The depreciation on the asset retirement costs is removed from the depreciation expense per books since the effect of AROs is income statement neutral; it is offset by a regulatory credit on the income statement.

Question No. 65

Responding Witness: Shannon L. Charnas

- Q-65. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.12, page III-12 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E to the Spanos Testimony and page 4 of the Charnas Testimony.
- a. The amount of total annualized gas depreciation expense on line 4 of Reference Schedule 1.12 is $24,046,173, which compares to $18,379,928, the total amount shown on page III-9 of Exhibit JJS-KU. Describe in detail the reasons for this difference.
  - b. Based on test year end plant in service, provide a schedule at the same sub-account level as on page III-9 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E, which shows the derivation of the annualized gas depreciation expense amount on line 4 of Reference Schedule 1.12.
  - c. Provide a detailed description of the "assets set up for retirement obligations" referenced on line 18 of the Charnas Testimony, which result in the amount of $1,045,200 shown on line 6 of Reference Schedule 1.12.
- A-65. a. Schedule 1.12 line 4 reflects the allocation of 29% of common plant to gas plant. This allocation of common plant and the additional plant added between December 31, 2011, the end of the period covered in Mr. Spanos' depreciation study, and March 31, 2012, the end of the filed test year, account for the difference.
- b. See attachment to response to Question No. 64(b).
  - c. The "assets set up for retirement obligations" are the asset retirement costs established upon initial recognition of the liabilities for the asset retirement obligations. The depreciation on the asset retirement costs is removed from the depreciation expense per books since the effect of AROs is income statement neutral; it is offset by a regulatory credit on the income statement.

Dated July 31, 2012

Case No. 2012-00222

Question No. 66

Responding Witness: Valerie L. Scott

Q-66. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.13 and page 4 of the Testimony of Valerie L. Scott ("Scott Testimony").

- a. Page 2 of 4 of Reference Schedule 1.13 at line 4 shows percentages of how LG&E's test year labor breaks down between the amounts expensed and capitalized. Provide the percentages of the amounts of LG&E's labor costs expensed and capitalized for each of the calendar years 2007 through 2011.
- b. Page 2 of 4 of Reference Schedule 1.13 shows LG&E's test year operating labor was $97,140,144. This compares to $88,427,501 in operating labor during the test year ended October 31, 2009 in LG&E's most recent general rate case. The increase between the two test years is $8,712,643, an increase of 9.85 percent over a period of 29 months, which equates to an annual rate of increase of 4.1 percent. Provide a detailed discussion of the reasons for this increase, including, but not limited to increases in the number of employees.

A-66. a. The table below represents the percentage break down between operating labor and construction/other for the calendar years 2007 through 2011.

	Construction/
Year	Operating	Other
2007	71.263%	28.737%
2008	76.481%	23.519%
2009	75.433%	24.567%
2010	76.387%	23.613%
2011	73.588%	26.412%

- b. In the process of responding to this question, the Company identified an error in Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.13, related to duplication of storm costs, an account with a credit balance and severance payments that were inadvertently included in the calculation. The net impact of these adjustments was to increase labor during the test year, thereby decreasing the amount of the proforma adjustment that should have been reflected in the original filing by $377,127 ($301,701 electric and $75,426 gas). Attached is a revised Reference Schedule 1.13 showing the impact of the decrease on wages, payroll taxes and 401(k) costs.

The increase in test year operating labor was the result of wage increases, an increase in headcount and a decrease in costs allocated to LG&E. Wage increases represent approximately an 8% increase over the prior test year. These wage increases included, but are not limited to, annual increases, promotions and net differences in the pay rates of replacement employees. The increase attributable to headcount was approximately 7%. This headcount increase was mainly attributable to increases in generation, transmission and retail employees. For additional information concerning the increased headcount, please see responses to Questions 39, 47 and 55. The decrease attributable to costs allocated to LG&E was 5%. This decrease is a result of a decline in the allocation to LG&E based on its ownership percentage of joint-use assets primarily attributable to the dispatch of Trimble County Unit 2 beginning in January 2011. In addition, labor allocated to LG&E declined due to a shift in the cost allocation ratios that are based on headcount and total revenue and a decrease in labor charged to capital and other.

Responding Witness: Lonnie E. Bellar

- Q-67. Refer to Blake Exhibit 1, Reference Schedule 1.23 and pages 9-10 of the Bellar Testimony. In LG&E's most recent general rate case, its estimate of total rate case expenses was $965,000. Provide the reasons for the increased estimate of $1,490,000, an increase of 54 percent, for the current case.
- A-67. The actual recoverable rate case expense in LG&E's most recent general rate case, Case No. 2009-00549, was $1,319,881. The actual increase from the estimate in the last case is primarily attributable to the cost of the newspaper notices of $772,116. The actual amount from the last case was used to estimate the rate case expenses for the current case. See response to PSC 1-57(b).

Question No. 68

Responding Witness: Shannon L. Charnas

- Q-68. Refer to Blake Exhibit 10 and pages 5 through 6 of the Blake Testimony. The exhibit contains projected capital expenditures by LG&E for the years 2012 through 2016 as reflected in its 2011 10K filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC").
- a. Provide the projected annual capital expenditures for LG&E as reflected in its SEC 10K filings for each of the years 2006 through 2010 and its actual annual capital expenditures for the years 2007 through 2011.
  - b. The "Generating facilities" and "Transmission facilities" headings in the first column in the exhibit have, respectively, "(a)" and "(b)" after the word "facilities" but there is no explanation, footnote, etc. for these letters. Explain their purpose and state whether something is missing from the exhibit
- A-68. a. Projected capital expenditures for each three-year period as disclosed in the 2006 LG&E 10-K<sup>2</sup> and 2007-2010 LG&E Annual Reports were as follows:

LG&E ($ millions)	2007- 2009	2008- 2010	2009- 2011	2010- 2012	2011- 2013
2006	665
2007		735
2008			690
2009				785
2010					1,569

<sup>2</sup> LG&E did not file a Form 10-K with the SEC for years 2007 through 2010.

Actual annual capital expenditures for LG&E were as follows:

LG&amp;E ($ millions)<sup>3</sup>
2007	221
2008	237
2009	186
2010	211
2011	207

- b. Footnotes “(a)” and “(b)” were inadvertently omitted from Blake Exhibit 10. The purpose of the footnotes is to explain certain costs included in those line items. The following are the footnotes as stated in LG&E’s 2011 Form 10-K filing:

- (a) Includes approximately $200 million of currently estimable costs related to replacement generation units due to EPA regulations not recoverable through the ECR mechanism. LG&E expects to recover these costs over a period equivalent to the related depreciable lives of the assets through future rate proceedings.
- (b) Includes approximately $70 million of currently estimable transmission costs related to replacement generation units. LG&E expects to recover these costs over a period equivalent to the related depreciable lives of the assets through future rate proceedings.

<sup>3</sup> Capital expenditures per the Statements of Cash Flows filed in LG&E’s Annual Reports for years 2007 through 2009 and LG&E’s 2011 Form 10-K for years 2010 and 2011. LG&E did not file a Form 10-K with the SEC for years 2007 through 2010.

Provide the rating agency reports from Standard & Poor's Corporation, Moody's Investors Service and Fitch Ratings Ltd. that discuss and or award LG&E's current credit rating scores, as well as the reports cited in footnotes 3 through 10, and any other reports issued by the three rating agencies related to LG&E in 2011 or 2012.

- Q-70. Refer to the Avera Testimony, page 12. LG&E indicates that investors and rating agencies are aware that it can only recover its actual costs and that it earns no return on fuel, purchased power or natural gas supply costs and that it is exposed to disallowances in its energy procurement.
- a. In addition to actual cost recovery, explain whether LG&E is proposing to earn a return in conjunction with the items listed above and how that would be accomplished.
  - b. Explain whether any of the ratings agencies stated or implied to LG&E that it needs to earn returns on the items listed above in order to maintain its financial integrity or mitigate any perceived risk.
  - c. The fuel, purchased power, or natural gas procurement process is well established in Kentucky and should be well understood by LG&E. Explain what actions this Commission has taken to heighten either company or investor concerns regarding disallowances and how this relates to exposure to fluctuations in power and gas supply costs.
- A-70.
- a. No, LGE is not proposing to earn a return on fuel or purchased power costs.
  - b. Dr. Avera is not aware of any statements by the rating agencies that suggest LGE needs to earn a return on fuel or purchased power costs.
  - c. Dr. Avera's testimony at page 12 did not claim that the Commission had taken any steps to heighten the risks associated with LGE's ability to recover its power supply costs. Rather, his testimony explained that, despite regulatory provisions that allow for periodic rate adjustments to reflect changes in power costs, investors nonetheless recognize that utilities such as LGE remain exposed to the potential need to finance power cost deferrals, especially during times of volatile energy prices, as well as to disallowances.

- Q-72. Refer to the Avera Testimony page 22 and Exhibit WEA-2. PPL is listed as one of the companies in the utility proxy group. Since LG&E is a PPL company, explain why the inclusion of PPL in the proxy group doesn't introduce some circularity into the ROE estimates.
- A-72. In estimating the cost of equity for purposes of establishing an allowed rate of return, it is common practice to include the utility, or the parent company in the case of an operating subsidiary, in the proxy group. Because LGE is a wholly owned subsidiary of PPL, and obtains investor-supplied equity capital solely from its parent, investors' expectations and perceptions for PPL provide one logical benchmark on which to estimate investors' required return. While expectations regarding the allowed ROE for LGE would be considered in investors' assessment of the risks and returns associated with an investment in PPL, this is only one of many factors that form the basis for their expectations. As a result, there is no basis to exclude PPL on the basis of circularity.

Responding Witness: William E. Avera

- Q-75. Refer to the Avera Testimony, page 36. Since the sustainable growth approach requires an expected earned return on equity and the subject of the testimony is to set a return on equity, explain why this is not, in part, a circular argument.
- A-75. While Dr. Avera's testimony indicates that the earnings growth projections of securities analysts provide a superior guide to investors' expectations, the sustainable growth approach is frequently referenced in regulatory proceedings and is consistent with the theory underlying the constant growth DCF model. In implementing the constant growth DCF model, a key requirement is that the growth rates reflect the forward-looking expectations of investors, which includes their assumptions regarding the actual rates of return expected in future periods. These expected earned rates of return are dependent on the authorized rates of return that are expected in future periods, but this is also the case for future growth in earnings, dividends, and book value, which are all ultimately tied to a utility's ability to recover its reasonable and necessary costs of service, including a fair ROE. In other words, it is investors' expectations – including those for future allowed ROEs – that determine observable stock prices, and these are the only proper basis for the growth rate used in applying the DCF model.

- Q-77. Refer to the Avera Testimony, page 45 through 47 and Exhibit WEA-6.
- a. Provide the article referenced on page 46 in footnote 45.
  - b. Explain why it was necessary to weight the firms in the calculations as opposed to performing the calculations on an unweighted basis.
  - c. Explain the nature of the relationship between firm size and return.
  - d. Explain how analysts use this relationship in a non-regulated environment where product and service prices are set by the market.
  - e. Explain why 30 year treasury bonds, as opposed to 20 year treasury bonds, were used in the model.
  - f. Provide the calculation for the dividend as explained in footnote (a) of Exhibit WEA-6 page 2.
  - g. Provide the IBES growth rates referenced in footnote (b) of Exhibit WEA-6 page 2 and show how the 10.8 percent growth rate was calculated.
  - h. Provide Table C-1 referenced in footnote (i) of Exhibit WEA-6, page 2.
- A-77.
- a. Please refer to Dr. Avera's workpapers, which were provided in response to KIUC 1-10.
  - b. Market weighting was applied in order to be consistent with the S&P 500 Index, which is market-weighted.
  - c. Please refer to the discussion at page 46, line 8 to page 47, line 9 of Dr. Avera's testimony. This size effect has been discussed in numerous articles in the financial research. See, e.g., Banz, Rolf W., "The Relationship Between Return and Market Value of Common Stocks,” Journal of Financial Economics (September 1981), a copy of which is attached. Please also refer to the response to KIUC 1-16 (a).

- d. As documented in the response to subpart (c) above, the relationship between firm size and investors’ required rate of return in applying the CAPM has been documented for firms in the competitive and regulated sectors. The fact that the prices charged by non-regulated firms are established through competitive markets does not alter the fact that empirical research has demonstrated that the beta values used to apply the CAPM fail to fully reflect the risks associated with firm size.
- e. Unlike debt instruments, common equity extends to perpetuity. As a result, any application of the CAPM to estimate the return that investors require must be predicated on their expectations for the firm’s long-term risks and prospects. In applying the CAPM, Morningstar recognized that the cost of equity is a long-term cost of capital and the appropriate interest rate to use is a long-term bond yield:

The horizon of the chosen Treasury security should match the horizon of whatever is being valued. ... Note that the horizon is a function of the investment, not the investor. If an investor plans to hold a stock in a company for only five years, the yield on a five-year Treasury note would not be appropriate since the company will continue to exist beyond those five years. Morningstar, “Ibbotson SBBI, 2008 Valuation Yearbook,” at 59 (copy attached).

Accordingly, proper application of the CAPM should focus on long-term government bonds, with 30-year Treasury bonds representing the longest maturity available. Because the Treasury has not consistently issued 30-year bonds, historical studies, such as those published by Morningstar, often rely on 20-year Treasury bond yields. As discussed in his testimony, Dr. Avera did not rely on historical information to apply the CAPM, and he properly matched his estimated market rate of return with the 30-year Treasury bond yield, consistent with the long-term horizon of common stocks.

This study examines the empirical relationship between the return and the total market value of NYSE common stocks. It is found that smaller firms have had higher risk adjusted returns, on average, than larger firms. This 'size effect' has been in existence for at least forty years and is evidence that the capital asset pricing model is misspecified. The size effect is not linear in the market value; the main effect occurs for very small firms while there is little difference in return between average sized and large firms. It is not known whether size per se is responsible for the effect or whether size is just a proxy for one or more true unknown factors correlated with size.

1. Introduction

The single-period capital asset pricing model (henceforth CAPM) postulates a simple linear relationship between the expected return and the market risk of a security. While the results of direct tests have been inconclusive, recent evidence suggests the existence of additional factors which are relevant for asset pricing. Litzenberger and Ramaswamy (1979) show a significant positive relationship between dividend yield and return of common stocks for the 1936-1977 period. Basu (1977) finds that price-earnings ratios and risk adjusted returns are related. He chooses to interpret his findings as evidence of market inefficiency but as Ball (1978) points out, market efficiency tests are often joint tests of the efficient market hypothesis and a particular equilibrium relationship. Thus, some of the anomalies that have been attributed to a lack of market efficiency might well be the result of a misspecification of the pricing model.

This study contributes another piece to the emerging puzzle. It examines the relationship between the total market value of the common stock of a firm and its return. The results show that, in the 1936-1975 period, the common stock of small firms had, on average, higher risk-adjusted returns than a common stock of large firms. This result will henceforth be referred to as the 'size effect'. Since the results of the study are not based on a particular theoretical equilibrium model, it is not possible to determine conclusively whether market value per se matters or whether it is only a proxy for unknown true additional factors correlated with market value. The last section of this paper will address this question in greater detail.

The various methods currently available for the type of empirical research presented in this study are discussed in section 2. Since there is a considerable amount of confusion about their relative merit, more than one technique is used. Section 3 discusses the data. The empirical results are presented in section 4. A discussion of the relationship between the size effect and other factors, as well as some speculative comments on possible explanations of the results, constitute section 5.

2. Methodologies

The empirical tests are based on a generalized asset pricing model which allows the expected return of a common stock to be a function of risk  $\beta$  and an additional factor  $\phi$ , the market value of the equity.<sup>1</sup> A simple linear relationship of the form

$$E(R_i) = \gamma_0 + \gamma_1 \beta_i + \gamma_2 [(\phi_i - \phi_m) / \phi_m], \quad (1)$$

is assumed, where

- $E(R_i)$  = expected return on security  $i$ ,
- $\gamma_0$  = expected return on a zero-beta portfolio,
- $\gamma_1$  = expected market risk premium,
- $\phi_i$  = market value of security  $i$ ,
- $\phi_m$  = average market value, and
- $\gamma_2$  = constant measuring the contribution of  $\phi_i$  to the expected return of a security.

If there is no relationship between  $\phi_i$  and the expected return, i.e.,  $\gamma_2 = 0$ , (1) reduces to the Black (1972) version of the CAPM.

Since expectations are not observable, the parameters in (1) must be estimated from historical data. Several methods are available for this purpose. They all involve the use of pooled cross-sectional and time series regressions to estimate  $\gamma_0$ ,  $\gamma_1$ , and  $\gamma_2$ . They differ primarily in (a) the assumption concerning the residual variance of the stock returns (homoscedastic or heteroscedastic in the cross-sectional), and (b) the treatment of the errors-in-variables problem introduced by the use of estimated betas in (1). All methods use a constrained optimization procedure, described in Fama (1976, ch. 9), to generate minimum variance (m.v.) portfolios with mean returns  $\gamma_i$ ,  $i=0, \dots, 2$ . This imposes certain constraints on the portfolio weights, since from (1)

where the  $w_j$  are the portfolio proportions of each asset  $j$ ,  $j=1, \dots, N$ . An examination of (2) shows that  $\hat{\gamma}_0$  is the mean return of a standard m.v. portfolio ( $\sum_j w_j = 1$ ) with zero beta and  $\phi_p \equiv \sum_j w_j \phi_j = \phi_m$  [to make the second and third terms of the right-hand side of (2) vanish]. Similarly,  $\hat{\gamma}_1$  is the mean return on a zero-investment m.v. portfolio with beta of one and  $\phi_p = 0$ , and  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  is the mean return on a m.v. zero-investment, zero-beta portfolio with  $\phi_p = \phi_m$ . As shown by Fama (1976, ch. 9), this constrained optimization can be performed by running a cross-sectional regression of the form on a period-by-period basis, using estimated betas  $\hat{\beta}_{it}$  and allowing for either homoscedastic or heteroscedastic error terms. Invoking the usual stationarity arguments the final estimates of the gammas are calculated as the averages of the  $T$  estimates.

One basic approach involves grouping individual securities into portfolios on the basis of market value and security beta, reestimating the relevant parameters (beta, residual variance) of the portfolios in a subsequent period, and finally performing either an ordinary least squares (OLS) regression [Fama and MacBeth (1973)] which assumes homoscedastic errors, or a generalized least squares (GLS) regression [Black and Scholes (1974)] which allows for heteroscedastic errors, on the portfolios in each time period.<sup>2</sup> Grouping reduces the errors-in-variables problem, but is not very efficient because it does not make use of all information. The errors-in-variables problem should not be a factor as long as the portfolios contain a reasonable number of securities.<sup>3</sup>

Litzenberger and Ramaswamy (1979) have suggested an alternative method which avoids grouping. They allow for heteroscedastic errors in the cross-section and use the estimates of the standard errors of the security betas estimates of the measurement errors. As Theil (1971, p. 610) has pointed out, this method leads to unbiased maximum likelihood estimators for the gammas as long as the error in the standard error of beta is small and the standard assumptions of the simple errors-in-variables model are met. Thus, it is very important that the diagonal model is the correct specification of the return-generating process, since the residual variance assumes a critical position in this procedure. The Litzenberger-Ramaswamy method is superior from a theoretical viewpoint; however, preliminary work has shown that it leads to serious problems when applied to the model of this study and is not pursued any further.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>2</sup>Black and Scholes (1974) do not take account of heteroscedasticity, even though their method was designed to do so.

Instead of estimating equation (3) with data for all securities, it is also possible to construct arbitrage portfolios containing stocks of very large and very small firms, by combining long positions in small firms with short positions in large firms. A simple time series regression is run to determine the difference in risk-adjusted returns between small and large firms. This approach, long familiar in the efficient markets and option pricing literature, has the advantage that no assumptions about the exact functional relationships between market value and expected return need to be made, and it will therefore be used in this study.

3. Data

The sample includes all common stocks quoted on the NYSE for at least five years between 1926 and 1975. Monthly price and return data and the number of shares outstanding at the end of each month are available in the monthly returns file of the Center for Research in Security Prices (CRSP) of the University of Chicago. Three different market indices are used; this is in response to Roll's (1977) critique of empirical tests of the CAPM. Two of the three are pure common stock indices — the CRSP equally- and value-weighted indices. The third is more comprehensive: a value-weighted combination of the CRSP value-weighted index and return data on corporate and government bonds from Ibbotson and Sinquefeld (1977) (henceforth 'market index').<sup>5</sup> The weights of the components of this index are derived from information on the total market value of corporate and government bonds in various issues of the Survey of Current Business (updated annually) and from the market value of common stocks in the CRSP monthly index file. The stock indices, made up of riskier assets, have both higher returns

<sup>4</sup>If the diagonal model (or market model) is an incomplete specification of the return generating process, the estimate of the standard error of beta is likely to have an upward bias, since the residual variance estimate is too large. The error in the residual variance estimate appears to be related to the second factor. Therefore, the resulting gamma estimates are biased.

<sup>5</sup>No pretense is made that this index is complete; thus, the use of quotation marks. It ignores real estate, foreign assets, etc.; it should be considered a first step toward a comprehensive index. See Ibbotson and Fall (1979).

and higher risk than the bond indices and the 'market index' time series of commercial paper returns is used as the risk-free rate.<sup>7</sup> While not actually constant through time, its variation is very small when compared to that of the other series, and it is not significantly correlated with any of the three indices used as market proxies.

4. Empirical results

4.1. Results for methods based on grouped data

The portfolio selection procedure used in this study is identical to the one described at length in Black and Scholes (1974). The securities are assigned to one of twenty-five portfolios containing similar numbers of securities, first to one of five on the basis of the market value of the stock, then the securities in each of those five are in turn assigned to one of five portfolios on the basis of their beta. Five years of data are used for the estimation of the security beta; the next five years' data are used for the reestimation of the portfolio betas. Stock price and number of shares outstanding at the end of the five year periods are used for the calculation of the market proportions. The portfolios are updated every year. The cross-sectional regression (3) is then performed in each month and the means of the resulting time series of the gammas could be (and have been in the past) interpreted as the final estimators. However, having used estimated parameters, it is not certain that the series have the theoretical properties, in particular, the hypothesized beta. Black and Scholes (1974, p. 17) suggest that the time series of the gammas be regressed once more on the excess return of the market index. This correction involves running the time series regression (for  $\hat{\gamma}_2$ )

$$\hat{\gamma}_{2t} - R_{Ft} = \hat{\alpha}_2 + \hat{\beta}_2(R_{mt} - R_{Ft}) + \hat{\epsilon}_{2t}. \quad (4)$$

It has been shown earlier that the theoretical  $\beta_2$  is zero. (4) removes the effects of a non-zero  $\beta_2$  on the return estimate  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  and  $\hat{\alpha}_2$  is used as the final estimator for  $\hat{\gamma}_2 - R_F$ . Similar corrections are performed for  $\gamma_0$  and  $\gamma_1$ . The de.  $\beta_i$ ,  $i=0, \dots, 2$ , in (4) from their theoretical values also allow us to check whether the grouping procedure is an effective means to eliminate the errors-in-beta problem.

The results are essentially identical for both OLS and GLS and for all three indices. Thus, only one set of results, those for the 'market index' with GLS, is presented in table 1. For each of the gammas, three numbers are reported: the mean of that time series of returns which is relevant for the test of the hypothesis of interest (i.e., whether or not  $\hat{\gamma}_0$  and  $\hat{\gamma}_1$  are different from the risk-free rate and the risk premium, respectively), the associated  $t$ -statistic, and finally, the estimated beta of the time series of the gamma from (4). Note that the means are corrected for the deviation from the theoretical beta as discussed above.

The table shows a significantly negative estimate for  $\gamma_2$  for the overall time period. Thus, shares of firms with large market values have had smaller returns, on average, than similar small firms. The CAPM appears to be misspecified. The table also shows that  $\gamma_0$  is different from the risk-free rate. As both Fama (1976, ch. 9) and Roll (1977) have pointed out, if a test does not use the true market portfolio, the Sharpe-Lintner model might be wrongly rejected. The estimates for  $\gamma_0$  are of the same magnitude as those reported by Fama and MacBeth (1973) and others. The choice of a market index and the econometric method does not affect the results. Thus, at least within the context of this study, the choice of a proxy for the market portfolio does not seem to affect the results and allowing for heteroscedastic disturbances does not lead to significantly more efficient estimators.

Before looking at the results in more detail, some comments on econometric problems are in order. The results in table 1 are based on the 'market index' which is likely to be superior to pure stock indices from a theoretical viewpoint since it includes more assets [Roll (1977)]. This superiority has its price. The actual betas of the time series of the gammas are reported in table 1 in the columns labeled  $\hat{\beta}_i$ . Recall that the theoretical values of  $\beta_0$  and  $\beta_1$  are zero and one, respectively. The standard zero-beta portfolio with return  $\hat{\gamma}_0$  contains high beta stocks in short positions and low beta stocks in long positions, while the opposite is the case for the zero-investment portfolio with return  $\hat{\gamma}_1$ . The actual betas are all significantly different from the theoretical values. This suggests a regression effect, i.e., the past betas of high beta securities are overestimated and the betas of low beta securities are underestimated.<sup>8</sup> Past beta is not completely uncorrelated with the error of the current beta and the instrumental variable approach to the error-in-variables problem is not entirely successful.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>8</sup>There is no such effect for  $\beta_2$  because that portfolio has both zero beta and zero investment; i.e., net holdings of both high and low beta securities are, on average, zero.

1. Deviations from the theoretical betas are largest for the 'market index' and smallest for the CRSP value-weighted index, and smallest for the CRSP equally-weighted index. This is due to two factors: first, even if the true covariance structure is stationary, betas with respect to a value-weighted index change whenever the weights change, since the weighted average of the betas is constrained to be equal to one. Second, the betas and their standard errors with respect to the 'market index' are much larger than for the stock indices (a typical stock beta is between two and three), which leads to larger deviations — a kind of 'leverage' effect. Thus, the results in table 1 show that the final correction for the deviation of  $\hat{\beta}_0$  and  $\hat{\beta}_1$  from their theoretical values is of crucial importance for market proxies with changing weights.

Estimated portfolio betas and portfolio market proportions are (negatively) correlated. It is therefore possible that the errors in beta induce an error in the coefficient of the market proportion. According to Levi (1973), the probability limit of  $\hat{\gamma}_1$  in the standard errors-in-the-variables model is

$$\text{plim } \hat{\gamma}_1 = \gamma_1 / (1 + (\sigma_u^2 \cdot \sigma_\beta^2) / D) < \gamma_1,$$

$$D = (\sigma_\beta^2 + \sigma_u^2) \cdot \sigma_\phi^2 - \sigma_{12}^2 > 0,$$ where  $\sigma_\beta^2$ ,  $\sigma_\phi^2$  are the variances of the true factors  $\beta$  and  $\phi$ , respectively,  $\sigma_u^2$  is the variance of the error in beta and  $\sigma_{12}$  is the covariance of  $\beta$  and  $\phi$ . Thus, the bias in  $\hat{\gamma}_1$  is unambiguously towards zero for positive  $\gamma_1$ . The probability limit of  $\hat{\gamma}_2 - \gamma_2$  is [Levi (1973)]

$$\text{plim } (\hat{\gamma}_2 - \gamma_2) = (\sigma_u^2 \cdot \sigma_{12} \cdot \gamma_1) / D.$$

We find that the bias in  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  depends on the covariance between  $\beta$  and  $\phi$  and the sign of  $\gamma_1$ . If  $\sigma_{12}$  has the same sign as the covariance between  $\beta$  and  $\phi$ , i.e.,  $\sigma_{12} < 0$ , and if  $\gamma_1 > 0$ , then  $\text{plim } (\hat{\gamma}_2 - \gamma_2) < 0$ , i.e.,  $\text{plim } \hat{\gamma}_2 < \gamma_2$ . If the grouping procedure is not successful in removing the error in beta, then it is likely that the reported  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  overstates the true magnitude of the size effect. If this was a serious problem in this study, the results for the different market indices should reflect the problem. In particular, using the equally-weighted stock index should then lead to the smallest size effect since, as was pointed out earlier, the error in beta problem is apparently less serious for that kind of index. In fact, we find that there is little difference between the estimates.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>10</sup>For the overall time period,  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  with the equally-weighted CRSP index is  $-0.00044$ , with the value weighted CRSP index  $-0.00044$  as well as opposed to the  $-0.00052$  for the 'market index' reported in table 1. The estimated betas of  $\hat{\gamma}_0$  and  $\hat{\gamma}_1$  which reflect the degree of the error in beta problems are 0.07 and 0.91, respectively, for the equally-weighted CRSP index and 0.13 and 0.87 for the value-weighted CRSP index.

Thus, it does not appear that the size effect is just a proxy for the unobservable true beta even though the market proportion and the beta of securities are negatively correlated.

The correlation coefficient between the mean market values of the twenty-five portfolios and their betas is significantly negative, which might have introduced a multicollinearity problem. One of its possible consequences is coefficients that are very sensitive to addition or deletion of data. This effect does not appear to occur in this case: the results do not change significantly when five portfolios are dropped from the sample. Revising the grouping procedure — ranking on the basis of beta first, then ranking on the basis of market proportion — also does not lead to substantially different results.

4.2. A closer look at the results

An additional factor relevant for asset pricing — the market value of the equity of a firm — has been found. The results are based on a linear model. Linearity was assumed only for convenience and there is no theoretical reason (since there is no model) why the relationship should be linear. If it is nonlinear, the particular form of the relationship might give us a starting point for the discussion of possible causes of the size effect in the next section. An analysis of the residuals of the twenty-five portfolios is the easiest way to look at the linearity question. For each month  $t$ , the estimated residual return is calculated for all portfolios. The mean residuals over the forty-five year sample period are plotted as a function of the mean market proportion in fig. 1. Since the distribution of the market proportions is very skewed, a logarithmic scale is used. The solid line connects the mean residual returns of each size group. The numbers identify the individual portfolios within each group according to beta, '1' being the one with the largest beta, '5' being the one with the smallest beta.

The figure shows clearly that the linear model is misspecified.<sup>11</sup> The residuals are not randomly distributed around zero. The residuals of the portfolios containing the smallest firms are all positive; the remaining ones are close to zero. As a consequence, it is impossible to use  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  as a simple size premium in the cross-section. The plot also shows, however, that the misspecification is not responsible for the significance of  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  since the linear model underestimates the true size effect present for very small firms. To illustrate this point, the five portfolios containing the smaller firms are deleted from the sample and the parameters reestimated. The results summarized in table 2, show that the  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  remain essentially the same. The relationship is still not linear; the new  $\hat{\gamma}_2$  still cannot be used as a size premium.

Fig. 1 suggests that the main effect occurs for very small firms. Further support for this conclusion can be obtained from a simple test. We can regress the returns of the twenty-five portfolios in each result on beta alone and examine the residuals. The regression is misspecified and the residuals contain information about the size effect. Fig. 2 shows the plot of those residuals in the same format as fig. 1. The smallest firms have, on average, very large unexplained mean returns. There is no significant difference between the residuals of the remaining portfolios.

Fig. 1. Mean residual returns of portfolios (1936-1975) with equally-weighted CRSP index as market proxy. The residual is calculated with the three-factor model [eq. (3)]. The numbers 1, ..., 5 represent the mean residual return for the five portfolios within each size group (1: portfolio with largest beta, ..., 5: portfolio with smallest beta). + represents the mean of the mean residuals of the five portfolios with similar market values.

Fig. 2. Mean residual returns of portfolios (1936-1975) with equally-weighted CRSP index as market proxy. The residual is calculated with the two-factor model ( $\hat{\epsilon}_{it} = R_{it} - \hat{\gamma}_{0t} - \hat{\gamma}_{1t}\beta_{it}$ ). The symbols are as defined for fig. 1.

4.3. 'Arbitrage' portfolio returns

One important empirical question still remains: How important is the size effect from a practical point of view? Fig. 2 suggests that the difference in returns between the smallest firms and the remaining ones is, on average, about 0.4 percent per month. A more dramatic result can be obtained when the securities are chosen solely on the basis of their market value.

As an illustration, consider putting equal dollar amounts into portfolios containing the smallest, largest and median-sized firms at the beginning of a year. These portfolios are to be equally weighted and contain, say, ten, twenty or fifty securities. They are to be held for five years and are rebalanced every month. They are levered or unlevered to have the same beta. We are then interested in the differences in their returns, where  $R_{st}$ ,  $R_{at}$  and  $R_{lt}$  are the returns on the portfolios containing the smallest, median-sized and largest firms at portfolio formation time (and  $R_{lt} = R_{2t} + R_{3t}$ ). The procedure involves (a) the calculation of the three differences in raw returns in each month and (b) running time series regressions of the differences on the excess returns of the market proxy. The intercept terms of these regressions are then interpreted as the  $\bar{R}_i$ ,  $i=1, \dots, 3$ . Thus, the differences can be interpreted as 'arbitrage' returns, since, e.g.,  $R_{lt}$  is the return obtained from holding the smallest firms long and the largest firms short, representing zero net investment in a zero-beta portfolio.<sup>12</sup> Simple equally weighted portfolios are used rather than more sophisticated minimum variance portfolios to demonstrate that the size effect is not due to some quirk in the covariance matrix.

Table 3 shows that the results of the earlier tests are fully confirmed.  $\bar{R}_2$ , the difference in returns between very small firms and median-size firms, is typically considerably larger than  $\bar{R}_3$ , the difference in returns between median-sized and very large firms. The average excess return from holding very small firms long and very large firms short is, on average, 1.52 percent per . . . or 19.8 percent on an annualized basis. This strategy, which suggests very large 'profit opportunities', leaves the investor with a poorly diversified portfolio. A portfolio of small firms has typically much larger residual risk with respect to a value-weighted index than a portfolio of very large firms with the same number of securities [Banz (1978, ch. 3)]. Since the fifty largest firms make up more than 25 percent of the total market value of NYSE stocks, it is not surprising that a larger part of the variation of the return of a portfolio of those large firms can be explained by its relation with the value-weighted market index. Table 3 also shows that the strategy would not have been successful in every five year subperiod. Nevertheless, the magnitude of the size effect during the past forty-five years is such that it is of more than just academic interest.

5. Conclusions

The evidence presented in this study suggests that the CAPM is misspecified. On average, small NYSE firms have had significantly larger risk adjusted returns than large NYSE firms over a forty year period. This size effect is not linear in the market proportion (or the log of the market proportion) but is most pronounced for the smallest firms in the sample. The effect is also not very stable through time. An analysis of the ten year subperiods show substantial differences in the magnitude of the coefficient of the size factor (table 1).

There is no theoretical foundation for such an effect. We do not even know whether the factor is size itself or whether size is just a proxy for one or more true but unknown factors correlated with size. It is possible, however, to offer some conjectures and even discuss some factors for which size is suspected to proxy. Recent work by Reinganum (1980) has eliminated one obvious candidate: the price-earnings ( $P/E$ ) ratio.<sup>13</sup> He finds that the  $P/E$ -effect, as reported by Basu (1977), disappears for both NYSE and AMEX stocks when he controls for size but that there is a significant size effect even when he controls for the  $P/E$ -ratio, i.e., the  $P/E$ -ratio effect is a proxy for the size effect and not vice versa. Stattman (1980), who found a significant negative relationship between the ratio of book value and market value of equity and its return, also reports that this relationship is just a proxy for the size effect. Naturally, a large number of possible factors remain to be tested.<sup>14</sup> But the Reinganum results point out a potential problem with some of the existing negative evidence of the efficient market hypothesis. Basu believed to have identified a market inefficiency but his  $P/E$ -effect is just a proxy for the size effect. Given its longevity, it is likely that it is due to a market inefficiency but it is rather evidence of a pricing model misspecification. To the extent that tests of market efficiency use data of firms of different sizes and are based on the CAPM, their results might be at least contaminated by the size effect.

<sup>13</sup>The average correlation coefficient between  $P/E$ -ratio and market value is only 0.16 for individual stocks for thirty-eight quarters ending in 1978. But for the portfolios formed on the basis of  $P/E$ -ratio, it rises to 0.82. Recall that Basu (1977) used ten portfolios in his study.

One possible explanation involving the size of the firm directly is based on a model by Klein and Bawa (1977). They find that if insufficient information is available about a subset of securities, investors will not hold these securities because of estimation risk, i.e., uncertainty about the true parameters of the return distribution. If investors differ in the amount of information available, they will limit their diversification to different subsets of all securities in the market.<sup>15</sup> It is likely that the amount of information generated is related to the size of the firm. Therefore, many investors would not desire to hold the common stock of very small firms. I have shown elsewhere [Banz (1978, ch. 2)] that securities sought by only a subset of the investors have higher risk-adjusted returns than those considered by all investors. Thus, lack of information about small firms leads to limited diversification and therefore to higher returns for the 'undesirable' stocks of small firms.<sup>16</sup> While this informal model is consistent with the empirical results, it is, nevertheless, just conjecture.

To summarize, the size effect exists but it is not at all clear why it exists. Until we find an answer, it should be interpreted with caution. It might be tempting to use the size effect, e.g., as the basis for a theory of mergers — large firms are able to pay a premium for the stock of small firms since they will be able to discount the same cash flows at a smaller discount rate. Naturally, this might turn out to be complete nonsense if size were to be shown to be just a proxy.

The preceding discussion suggests that the results of this study leave many questions unanswered. Further research should consider the relationship between size and other factors such as the dividend yield effect, and the tests should be expanded to include OTC stocks as well.

<sup>16</sup>A similar result can be obtained with the introduction of fixed holding costs which lead to limited diversification as well. See Brennan (1975), Banz (1978, ch. 2) and Mayshar (1979).

However, an estimate of each of the above three variables must be formed. Like all components of the cost of capital, these variables should be measured on a forward-looking basis. Chapters 5 and 6 are devoted to estimating the equity risk premium and beta, respectively. Factors to consider in estimating the riskless rate are covered below.

Risk-Free Rate

The CAPM implicitly assumes the presence of a single riskless asset, that is, an asset perceived by all investors as having no risk. A common choice for the nominal riskless rate is the yield on a U.S. Treasury security. The ability of the U.S. government to create money to fulfill its debt obligations under virtually any scenario makes U.S. Treasury securities practically default-free. While interest rate changes cause government obligations to fluctuate in price, investors face essentially no default risk as to either coupon payment or return of principal.

The horizon of the chosen Treasury security should match the horizon of whatever is being valued. When valuing a business that is being treated as a going concern, the appropriate Treasury yield should be that of a long-term Treasury bond. Note that the horizon is a function of the investment, not the investor. If an investor plans to hold stock in a company for only five years, the yield on a five-year Treasury note would not be appropriate since the company will continue to exist beyond those five years.

In February of 1977 the Treasury began to issue 30-year Treasury securities. Prior to this date, the longest-term Treasury security was 20 years, which was the standard Ibbotson used for its data series. To remain consistent with Ibbotson's historical data series, the Ibbotson® Stocks, Bonds, Bills, and Inflation® Classic Yearbook continued to base the yield for its long-term government bond on one with close to 20 years to maturity. Bonds with at least 20 years to maturity continued to trade and, therefore, a proxy for the yield on 20-year Treasury securities was readily available. In October of 2001 the U.S. Treasury announced that it would no longer issue 30-year Treasury bonds and the 10-year bond became the longest term Treasury security offered; in 2005 this decision was reversed, and the U.S. Treasury resumed issuing 30-year Treasury bonds in February of 2006. Throughout this period Ibbotson continued (and continues) to use the 20-year yield for data-consistency purposes. Presently, differences in the yields of the currently available long-term instruments tend to be relatively small. Table 4-1 shows the current yields for several different horizons.

Q-78. Refer to the Avera Testimony, pages 48 and 49. The discussion regarding the use of historical information in the Capital Asset Pricing Model ("CAPM") ROE calculations and footnote 47 seems to suggest that the use of CAPM is inappropriate in today's financial climate. Explain whether LG&E is recommending that the CAPM derived ROE results not be considered, even though a CAPM analysis is part of the testimony.

A-78. Dr. Avera's testimony does indicate that the use of historical information in the CAPM is not appropriate because it violates the requirements of this approach, which is predicated on forward-looking estimates, and not on backward-looking returns. In addition, Dr. Avera's testimony explains why reliance on historical information is further compromised by current conditions in financial markets, which violate the assumptions of a static risk premium between common stocks and government bonds.

Because Dr. Avera's application of the CAPM was based only on forward-looking expectations, and not on historical relationships, it does not suffer from these infirmities. As a result, Dr. Avera properly considered the results of his application of the CAPM method in his evaluation of a fair ROE for LGE.

- Q-83. Refer to the discussion of the proposed changes to the CSRs beginning on page 19 of the Bellar Testimony.
- a. Explain whether LG&E has discussed the proposed changes with its two CSR customers, and if so, the customers' response to the incentive offered by the proposed changes.
  - b. Pages 21 and 22 of the Bellar Testimony cite recent PJM demand response auction prices and the statement is made that the proposed CSR10 credit strikes a reasonable balance between capacity market prices and the desire to encourage demand response. Explain whether physical curtailments are generally necessary during high usage times when market prices would be at higher peak prices.
  - c. Page 22 of the Bellar Testimony states that LG&E proposed to eliminate the system reliability event restriction on its ability to request a physical curtailment. Explain why a physical curtailment would be needed absent a system reliability event.
- A-83. a. LG&E's customer service representatives directly communicated the proposed changes to the customers that would be impacted at the time the rate case was being filed. Generally, customers' reactions included concern about the financial impact and an awareness of market conditions that caused LG&E to change rates.
- b. Considering physical curtailments in LG&E's CSR tariffs are limited with respect to annual hours of usage, physical curtailments would generally be necessary during times of high usage which usually results in relatively high market peak prices.
  - c. Outside of a system reliability event in which physical curtailment would be necessary, the Company can choose to physically curtail load under the provisions of the proposed CSR rider anytime the economic benefit of curtailment would be greater than the marginal cost of production utilizing another resource, typically this would be a combustion turbine or a market purchase.

Q-84. Refer to page 28 of the Bellar Testimony and proposed P.S.C. Gas No. 9, Original Sheet No. 86.1, Demand-Side Management Cost Recovery Mechanism ("DSM"). Explain how the DSM Incentive pertaining to gas customers is calculated, specifically how avoided costs consisting of both capacity and energy savings are calculated. The explanation should include an example calculation showing the components of capacity and energy savings, and the source document(s) used to calculate the savings.

A-84. The Company does not have gas specific energy efficiency programs. However, electric energy efficiency programs produce gas benefits. For example, the Home Energy Analysis provides low flow water savers to reduce the energy consumption of heating water for both gas and electric hot water heaters. Consequently, LG&E allocates cost to the gas side of the business for the gas efficiencies that are produced. The costs are allocated for each individual measure within each program based on DSM energy efficiency modeling. The model allocates cost between LG&E gas and electric based upon the proportion of net resource benefits achieved from each measure for gas and electric.

Net resource benefits are calculated by utilizing the DSMore model from Integral Analytics.). DSMore uses energy reduction curves associated with installed programmatic measures for both gas and electric and then applies these savings to the inputted avoided cost of gas supply for gas savings and the avoided electric capacity and energy cost for electric.

The DSM Incentive is then computed by multiplying the net resource savings expected from the approved programs that are to be installed during the upcoming twelve-month period times the less of fifteen (15) percent or five (5) percent of the program expenditures. The Company files the DSM Incentive Rate as part of its DSM Mechanism Annual Budget and DSM Balancing Adjustment each November and February respectively. The DSM Incentives are calculated per the filed tariff, approved programs and measures.

The specific details and inputs associated with this calculation can be found within the Company's DSM filing Case No. 2011-00134 in volume 2 of the Company's joint application.

Question No. 85

Responding Witness: J. Clay Murphy

Q-85. Refer to page 12 of the Murphy Testimony. In addition to the five principles developed by LG&E to guide the proposed expansion in its transportation program, explain and enumerate the customer characteristics and desires for expanded service offerings it considered as it reviewed and designed updates to its program. The explanation should include any communication with existing and potential TS customers concerning their eligibility, or lack thereof, for transportation service, and the value that transportation service represents to those customers.

A-85. The underlying foundation of LG&E's proposed expansion of its gas transportation programs – more basic even than the five principles enumerated on the above referenced page 12 – is to provide options to customers at a reasonable cost. LG&E's proposal to provide those options was guided by the five principles cited by LG&E:

- (1) Preservation and enhancement of system reliability;
- (2) Preservation of LG&E's obligation to serve;
- (3) Avoidance of stranded costs and transition costs and commensurate cost shifting;
- (4) Promotion of successful cost management of gas supplies for sales customers; and
- (5) Adherence to ratemaking principles associated with cost causation.

These five principles provided LG&E with guidance in how best to achieve that goal.

In LG&E's experience, customer desire for additional transportation services is relatively low. LG&E has about 25,000 commercial and industrial customers. Based on LG&E's records, from 2008 to the present, LG&E's Gas Supply Department has received inquiries from marketers or customers regarding about 40 commercial and industrial accounts. (See also LG&E's response to Question No. 26(e).)

In considering the inquiries over the last several years and examining the loads of customers requesting gas transportation service that ultimately did not qualify for service under one or more of LG&E's existing transportation programs (Rate FT or Rider TS), LG&E noted that many of those customers did not qualify because they were not high load factor customers (i.e., they did not meet the 50 Mcf/day minimum threshold volume; their gas consumption had significant space-heating characteristics; and their annual usage was less than the annual consumption level of 50,000 Mcf/year). Therefore, LG&E has proposed significant changes in the thresholds applicable to service under Rider TS by totally eliminating the daily threshold of 50 Mcf, and reducing by 50% the annual threshold from 50,000 Mcf/year to 25,000 Mcf/year as proposed for Rider TS-2.

LG&E also considered other transportation program service offerings in the Commonwealth and noted that the demarcation used by Columbia Gas of Kentucky, Inc. ("Columbia") between its large volume transportation program and its retail choice program is 25,000 Mcf/year. (See, for example, Columbia Gas of Kentucky's Rate Schedule SVGTS for Small Volume Gas Transportation Service and Rate Schedule DS for Delivery Service which incorporate that threshold level as the demarcation between its large and small volume transportation programs.)

Further ratifying the 25,000 Mcf/year threshold are the results of Columbia's 2012 Annual Report on its Customer Choice Program ("Annual Report") filed on June 19, 2012, in Case No. 2010-00233 and the Customer Choice Survey ("Survey") filed on July 13, 2012, in Case No. 2012-00132. Columbia's Annual Report continues to show losses by customers participating in its retail choice program, which participating customers include commercial customers using less than 25,000 Mcf/year. By volume, these commercial customers make up about half of the total volumes purchased from marketers. The results of Columbia's Survey indicate that saving money is the primary driver for commercial customers to participate in Columbia's choice program, and yet many commercial customers were apparently unsure whether or not they saved money.

LG&E's proposed threshold of 25,000 Mcf/year is further confirmed when looking at the number of customers and volumes that could be added to transportation service assuming a lower annual consumption threshold. As discussed in LG&E's response to Question No. 89, there are about three customers using about 260,000 Mcf/year who already qualify for transportation service and have not chosen to transport; and as discussed in LG&E's response to Question No. 90, there are about eight additional customers that will qualify under the lower Rider TS-2 threshold using about 248,000 Mcf/year. Add to these figures the current customer count of about 80 customers using about 11,500,000 Mcf/year already transporting their own gas supplies, and the potential size of the proposed expanded program increases to about 90 customers using about 12,000,000 Mcf/year. Lower thresholds can only be expected to yield higher numbers of customers with lower average per customer consumption. For example, a threshold of 10,000 Mcf/year could add to the above totals about 70 more customers using about 1,000,000 Mcf/year, nearly doubling the number of customers eligible for transportation, but only increasing the volume by about 8%.

Expanding LG&E's transportation program below the 25,000 Mcf/year threshold becomes untenable given the certainty of increased program costs and the uncertainty of customer savings -- or other undetermined benefit. Programs should be available at a minimal incremental cost to eligible customers. A significant program expansion, such as doubling the number of program participants, will require a significant investment in additional systems and personnel to facilitate an expanded end-use gas transportation program. These extra costs will need to be reflected in the Administrative Charge, further reducing the opportunity for customer savings, if any.

LG&E understands that potential and current gas transportation customers have been informed by third parties that they can save money or achieve other benefits by transporting their own gas supplies. As established by the KYPSC in Case No. 2010-00146, natural gas transportation programs do not necessarily guarantee actual customer savings (Order dated December 28, 2010, at p. 14). If, however, LG&E's proposed expansion of transportation eligibility pursuant to Rider TS-2 affords customers the opportunity to save money by securing the gas commodity at a cost lower than (or different from) LG&E's rate, this program expansion affords customers that opportunity without impacting the reliability or costs of other customers. It is difficult to justify an expansion of transportation eligibility in order to provide some customers with an uncertain opportunity, particularly when that opportunity could result in increased costs and degradation of reliability.

Therefore, based on these facts and analyses, LG&E ruled out a threshold for Rider TS-2 lower than the proposed 25,000 Mcf/year.

- Q-86. Refer to page 17 of the Murphy Testimony. Assuming an implementation date of November 1, 2013 for proposed Rider TS-2, explain what is the soonest date that a newly eligible customer could begin transporting gas pursuant to the enrollment schedule.
- A-86. LG&E anticipates that if the Commission approves Rider TS-2 that customers would be able to apply for service according to the schedule described therein, viz. by providing notice of election to company of such election on or before the preceding March 31, then the customer could begin taking service with the first effective date of Rider TS-2, that is, November 1, 2013.

Question No. 87

Responding Witness: J. Clay Murphy

Q-87. Refer to pages 18 and 19 of the Murphy Testimony. Describe LG&E's experience with large daily imbalances caused by TS customers.

A-87. Customers served under Rider TS do not have telemetry that allows either the customer or the company to access daily meter readings. However, customers served under Rider TS generally deliver their natural gas supplies to LG&E at uniform daily rates across the entire month. These uniform daily deliveries by customers served under Rider TS almost certainly do not match the daily gas usage of customers served under Rider TS. LG&E has determined the potential for Rider TS-2 customers to have "large daily imbalances" based on LG&E's considerable experience with the large daily imbalances of customers served under Rate FT (see the response to Question No. 22(d)), and in light of the month-end imbalances that can occur with customers served under Rider TS.

In order to provide customers served under Rider TS-2 (and their pool managers served under Rider PS-TS-2) with a tool to manage and help prevent daily and monthly imbalances, LG&E is proposing that these customers be provided with telemetry to allow them to assess and manage any over- or under-deliveries. (See the response to Question No. 26 and Question No. 27). In order to provide LG&E with a tool to prevent large daily imbalances by pool managers on behalf of Rider TS-2 customers and to provide certainty as to quantities to be delivered to its system, LG&E has proposed to have the ability to issue Action Alerts. Given the broadening of eligibility for transportation service, pool managers under Rider PS-TS-2 become like gas suppliers whose deliveries to LG&E's system need to be carefully managed. Action Alerts will allow LG&E to specify the required delivered quantities based on the customer's MDQ when necessary to preserve system reliability. (See the response to Question No. 26 and Question No. 27). Telemetry and Action Alerts are both critical elements to serving space-heating and lower load factor customers eligible for service under Rider TS-2.

- Q-88. Refer to page 21 of the Murphy Testimony. Explain whether there are currently no Pool Managers served under Rider PS-TS because TS customers are acting as their own pool managers.
- A-88. There are no pool managers currently served under Rider PS-TS. No customer under Rider TS is acting as its own pool manager. Customers served under Rider TS are not required to be in a pool, and none have elected to be a pool manager or join a pool.

Q-89. Explain how many Rate CGS customers are currently eligible for Rider TS service and have chosen to remain a sales service customer.

A-89. Both Rider TS and Rider TS-2 are currently or will be available to qualifying customers under Rates AAGS, CGS, and IGS.

LG&E estimates that there are currently about three customers served under the applicable rate schedules using about 260,000 Mcf/year that qualify for service under Rider TS but who have chosen not to pursue the available gas transportation service option. It is also anticipated that these customers will be eligible for service under Rider TS-2 when it is implemented on November 1, 2013, if they so elect.

A-90. Both Rider TS and Rider TS-2 are currently or will be available to qualifying customers under Rates AAGS, CGS, and IGS.

LG&E estimates that there are currently about eight customers served under the applicable rate schedules using about 248,000 Mcf/year that will qualify for service under Rider TS-2 when it is implemented on November 1, 2013, if they so elect.

Case No. 2012-00222

Question No. 91

Responding Witness: J. Clay Murphy

- Q-91. Refer to pages 26 and 27 of the Murphy Testimony.
- a. Explain whether all current FT customers have their transportation deliveries made to LG&E via Texas Gas.
  - b. Considering that LG&E is proposing Action Alerts to address the possibility of imbalances caused by TS-2 customers, explain why the additional flexibility provided by reducing the FT imbalance threshold is needed to serve these customers.
  - c. Explain what the impact would be to LG&E and other customer classes if the FT imbalance threshold were to remain at 10 percent as opposed to five percent as proposed by LG&E.
- A-91. a. Yes. See the response to Question No. 22 (c).
- b. Action Alerts issued pursuant to Rider PS-TS-2 will not eliminate imbalances, daily or otherwise. Similarly, Operational Flow Orders under Rate FT do not eliminate imbalances, daily or otherwise. Without Action Alerts, pool managers under Rider PS-TS-2 could choose to deliver significantly more, significantly less, or no gas on behalf of their customers. Action Alerts under Rider PS-TS-2 provide LG&E with a tool to specify, based on the customer's Maximum Daily Quantity ("MDQ"), an amount of gas to be delivered by the pool manager to LG&E on behalf of the customer. An Action Alert provides LG&E with certainty as to the amount that the pool manager will deliver on a day when an Action Alert is in effect.

Reducing the tolerance applicable to either customers under Rate FT or their pool manager under Rider PS-FT does not eliminate imbalances. Reducing the tolerance provides LG&E with a tool to incent customers (through the application of the "Utilization Charge for Daily Imbalances") to more closely match their deliveries to LG&E with their takes from LG&E. To the extent that LG&E can ensure that deliveries to customers and receipts from the pipeline on behalf of customers are in line, LG&E can ensure that system reliability can be maintained and that costs are associated with responsible customers. See also the response to Question No. 22(c), Question No. 22(d), and Question No. 22(e).

- c. Retaining the existing 10% daily threshold for customers served under Rate FT could expose all other customers to higher gas costs and system operating inefficiencies, particularly in the wake of expanded eligibility under Rider TS-2. LG&E's ability to balance its gas system is limited. As a result of expanding transportation service eligibility, balancing the system will become challenging. Reducing the threshold from 10% to 5% is a means to economically incent customers to manage responsibly their own gas supply activities. LG&E's preference is to lower the threshold rather than to increase the frequency of Operational Flow Orders. In any case, LG&E is responsible for maintaining system reliability and ensuring that other customers, including sales customers, are not harmed as the result of actions by transportation customers or their pool managers. - Q-92. Refer to page II-11 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E to the Spanos Testimony. The first sentence under the heading Schedules of Annual Transactions in Plant Records states that "The property group used to illustrate the retirement rate method is observed for the experience band 2002-2011 during which there were placements during the years 1997-2011."
- a. Explain whether the use of a 10-year experience band is an industry standard or is solely a matter of judgment by Mr. Spanos.
  - b. Explain whether it is coincidence that this 10-year experience band reflects placements for a period of 15 years or if this is a generic standard of some sort.
- A-92.
- a. The discussion on pages II-11 through II-23 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E is an example of the retirement rate method that uses hypothetical data, and the 10 year band is used for illustrative purposes.
  - b. See the response to part a). A 10 year experience band can have a range of placement bands, depending on the historical data.

- Q-93. Refer to page II-29 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E to the Spanos Testimony. Explain the reasoning for the cost of removal and salvage percentages being based on annual and three-year moving average bases as opposed to some other basis.
- A-93. The cost of removal and salvage percentages estimated for the depreciation study are based on informed judgment incorporating a number of factors, including the analysis of historical data. Standard practice in the industry is to analyze the cost of removal and salvage as a percentage of original cost retired. The annual percentages are presented to analyze these percentages for each year, and three-year averages are used to smooth fluctuations in the annual data. Both the annual percentages and moving averages help to analyze trends in the historical data. In the depreciation study, the overall averages for the period studied, as well as the most recent averages are also presented.

- a. Explain whether all of the original costs for each component of the facilities to be retired are included on pages 4 through 12. If not, for each component that is not included, provide a list identifying each component by account number and account title and its original cost.
  - b. Using the account numbers and account titles listed on pages 4 through 12, identify each component of the facility to be retired and its original cost and salvage that are included on pages 4 through 12.
  - c. Provide the date that each component of plant identified and listed in response to Item a. and Item b. above were first devoted to public service.
  - d. For each component identified and listed in response to Item a. above:
    - 1) Provide the net salvage value that was included in accumulated depreciation on the date that the component was removed from the schedule of plant in service.
    - 2) Provide the date that the component was removed from service and the date that it was removed from the plant schedule.

PSC Sept. 15, 2011).

- e. For each component identified and listed in response to Item b., provide the total net salvage included in accumulated depreciation as of December 31, 2011.

A-94.

- a. The original costs for each asset expected to be retired upon the final retirements of Cane Run Units 4, 5 and 6 are included on pages III-4 through III-12 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E.
- b. These assets, shown by account number on pages III-4 through III-12, are expected to be retired by the final retirement of the plants at the end of 2015. As shown on pages III-355 and III-356 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E, each generating plant is expected to have a net salvage of (10) percent of original cost when it is retired. The estimate of (10) percent is not separated into cost of removal and gross salvage components.
- c. The date each component of these plants was installed can be found by FERC account and location in the “Depreciation Calculations” section of Exhibit JJS-LG&E, pages III-523 through III-578.
- d.
  - 1) These assets have not yet been retired. As discussed in part b), the expected net salvage value for each FERC account can be found on pages III-355 and III-356 of Exhibit JJS-LG&E.
  - 2) These assets are currently in service, but are expected to be retired by the end of 2015.
  - 3) These assets have not yet been retired, and as a result cost of removal has not yet been charged to accumulated depreciation.
- e. Quantifying the precise amount of net salvage currently in accumulated depreciation for these generating units would require segregating all historical reserve activity from the installation dates of these units. Such analysis has not been performed for the depreciation study. However, the current remaining life depreciation rates are calculated based on the expected date of retirement (the end of 2015), and therefore the accumulated depreciation for each generating station will have the expected net salvage included in accumulated depreciation – that is, 10 percent of original cost.

- a. Provide details of the estimated costs to remove this facility and restore the location to a natural state.
  - b. Provide details of the estimated costs to stabilize this facility.
  - c. Provide a detailed list of all salvage values for each component of this facility.
- A-95. a. For electrical production facilities, with the exception of the old Waterside facility which was torn down (and paid for) by another party as the location for the new downtown Louisville arena, the Company has not historically torn down retired power plants. There are no current plans to take the Cane Run coal facility to ground and to restore it to its natural state. Plans include action to protect it from the weather, to seal off all pipes, and to secure the site for public safety. No estimate has been developed for taking the facility to a natural state.
- b. See attached.
  - c. No estimate of salvage values has been developed since there is currently no intention to take the facility down to a natural state.

Question No. 96

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-96. Refer to the Conroy Testimony at page 3 wherein he discusses the adjustment to operating revenues and expenses concerning the fuel adjustment clause ("FAC") and the inclusion of Interchange In energy as a component of Sales.
- a. Explain fully what is meant by Interchange In energy.
  - b. Conroy Exhibit P3, pages 2 and 3, show that System Losses would be affected by this change. Explain the effect of the proposed change on the calculation of System Losses.
  - c. Refer to any LG&E monthly FAC filing, Form A, page 3. The second row under section (A) is shown as "Purchases including interchange-in." Explain whether it is LG&E's assertion that, although this title indicates that Interchange In energy was included in the calculation, it was excluded in error. If not, explain. If yes, explain over what length of time the error has occurred.
  - d. Define Interchange Out energy and explain how is accounted for in the monthly FAC calculation.
- A-96. a. Interchange In in the context of the FAC refers to Inadvertent Interchange. Interchange is defined as energy transfers that cross Balancing Authority boundaries, and is equivalent to net purchases and sales. Inadvertent Interchange is the difference between the Balancing Authority's Net Actual Interchange and Net Scheduled Interchange.
- b. The change proposed by LG&E does not impact the calculation of the 12-month average loss factor. However, the loss factor is applied to subtotal sources less off-system sales, and the proposed change will impact the subtotal sources amount. Therefore, calculated losses will change.

- c. LG&E's research indicates that Interchange In has not been included in the determination of "Purchases including interchange-in." Form A filings and supporting documents were examined back to 2001 (the earliest data readily available) and Interchange In has not been included in the monthly FAC filings.
- d. Interchange is reported as a net power flow, and LG&E proposes to include the net interchange as a component of purchases since the inadvertent power flows in and out are not readily available.

- Q-98. Refer to page 14 of the Conroy Testimony. Explain the reason(s) given by the bypassing customer for leaving LG&E's special contract transportation service.
- A-98. The reason given by the customer for terminating the referenced special contract is that it is constructing a pipeline that will directly connect its facilities to the facilities of an interstate pipeline. It is LG&E's understanding that these facilities will be on the property of the customer. Additionally, the customer produces natural gas on its property. In combination, these two sources of natural gas have apparently rendered the continuance of the special contract less favorable economically for the customer. The customer gave notice to terminate the contract effective November 1, 2012, which termination was provided for in the special contract. See also the response to Question No. 31.

Question No. 100

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy / J. Clay Murphy

Q-100. Explain why it is necessary to weather normalize revenues for large volume customers, since testimony relating to expanding transportation service emphasizes the stable load characteristics of large volume users.

A-100. Large volume users typically take service under Rate FT rather than Rate IGS (or Rate CGS). Although Rate FT loads vary far less with respect to changes in temperature than Rate IGS or Rate CGS loads, some customers served under Rate FT may use a portion of their gas in applications which are temperature dependent. Consequently, Rate FT volumes can vary to a limited degree as a result of changes in temperature. Therefore, the load characteristics of customers served under Rate FT are far more stable than the load characteristics of customers taking service under Rate IGS.

Question No. 101

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy / J. Clay Murphy

Q-101. Explain why temperature sensitive usage imputed to IGS and FT customers is at a relatively high level – 37.6 percent and 23.3 percent, respectively according to Conroy Exhibit P12 page 2 of 4 – and why it is assumed that temperature and not some other factor of production or customer-specific reason is responsible for the variation in usage between July and August and other months.

Question No. 102

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-102. Explain whether LG&E has considered temperature normalizing its test year revenues using a period shorter than 30 years to establish normal weather.

A-102. No. The Order in Case No. 8616 dated March 2, 1983, stated as follows:

The Commission finds that a 30-year base period, as proposed by LG&E for determining normal weather condition, is appropriate. A current 30-year period provides accurate up-to-date information and at the same time is long enough to mitigate any abnormalities in weather conditions, whether they be yearly or cyclical. It is the Commission's conclusion that a 30-year base period should be used in future proceeding when adjusting gas sales to reflect normal temperature conditions, not only for LG&E but for all other gas utilities within the Commission's jurisdiction.

Question No. 104

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-104. Explain whether LG&E has considered expanding the months for temperature normalizing revenues pursuant to its WNA clause to include all months that typically reflect heating degree days. If not, explain why it is necessary to adjust RGS and CGS test year revenues for months in addition to November through April.

A-104. The adjustments to RGS and CGS for months other than November through April are the result of billing adjustments made in the months of May through October for bills issued in the months of November through April.

The WNA clause is designed to mitigate the impact of temperature variations on distribution costs for both LG&E and customers. Generally, the number of heating degree days in the months of May through October is not sufficient to support a temperature adjustment in those months.

Case No. 2012-00222

Question No. 105

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-105. Refer to Conroy Exhibit P12.

- a. Explain why Industrial Rate IGS on page 2 of 4 is temperature normalized using Billing cycle Heating Degree Days ("HDD") while AAGS, FT and Special Contracts are temperature normalized using Calendar Month Degree Days.
- b. Explain why Special Contracts' temperature normalization adjustment on page 2 of 4 is negative, and why it is appropriate to temperature normalize this class.
- c. Explain whether CGS Actual Billing Adjustment (Mcf) on page 3 of 4 should be 817,677.6 as shown on page 4 of 4, instead of 1,961,243, which appears to be the Actual Revenue Billing Adjustment from page 4 of 4. If so, provide a corrected CGS Total Net Temperature Normalization Adjustment for Customers Billed Under the WNA on page 3 of 4, a corrected Total Net Adjustment to Revenues and Total Mcf on page 1 of 4, and corrections to every other page and adjustment affected by this correction.

A-105. a. The rate classes are temperature normalized on the same basis as they are billed. Rate IGS is temperature normalized using billing cycle heating degree days ("HDD") because the customers on Rate IGS are billed on a billing-cycle basis. The customers on Rate AAGS, Rate FT, and Special Contracts are billed on a calendar month basis, therefore are temperature normalized on a calendar month degree day basis.

- b. In normalizing the Special Contract class, the methodology that has been used in prior rate cases was followed. However, the Special Contract class volumes included sales volumes for two inter-company Special Contracts that should not be included in the total for the Special Contracts class. The inter-company Special Contracts are not winter temperature sensitive and therefore should not be included in the analysis. These volumes have therefore been removed in the revised exhibit provided in response to item (c), below.

- c. The CGS Actual Billing Adjustment (Mcf) on page 3 of 4 should be 817,677.6 as shown on page 4 of 4 on Conroy Exhibit P12. The correction to the temperature normalization also affects Conroy Exhibit P6 – Adjustment for Year-end number of Customers. See the response to Question No. 108 for corrected exhibits and workpapers.

Dated July 31, 2012

Case No. 2012-00222

Question No. 106

Responding Witness: Lonnie E. Bellar

Q-106. In its two most recent base rate cases, Case Nos. 2008-00252 and 2009-00549,<sup>1</sup> LG&E proposed adjustments to its electric revenues and expenses based on the normalization of weather. Explain why LG&E did not propose an electric weather normalization adjustment in its application in this case.

A-106. In addition to the cases referenced above, electric temperature normalization adjustments were considered in KU's Case No. 98-474 and in Case No. 8284, Case No. 8616, Case No. 8924, Case No. 10064, and Case No. 98-426, which were LG&E rate proceedings. In each of these proceedings, the Commission denied the adjustment, noting that LG&E had failed to adequately support the adjustment. The Commission however continued to endorse the concept of normalization and expressed a willingness to consider temperature adjustments in future rate proceedings. (See Commission's Order in Case No. 98-474, dated January 7, 2000, at 70.)

In Case Nos. 98-474 and 98-426, the Commission expressed concern that KU and LG&E had failed to file the supporting regression analyses, modeling and forecasting assumptions, and calculation details. The Commission also expressed concern about the use of 20-year average degree days rather than a 30-year average, noting that "previous electric weather normalization adjustments proposed in the LG&E rate cases were based on a 30-year average. The 30-year average is typically used in gas weather normalization adjustments." (Ibid., at 74.)

LG&E addressed these stated concerns in Cases No. 2008-00252 and 2009-00549, making modifications in the latter case to simplify the analyses. Nonetheless, the Commission expressed reservations in both cases about the advisability of electric temperature normalization adjustments. LG&E did not

Q-107. The Conroy Testimony at pages 19 and 32 states that LG&E's gas and electric Cost of Service Studies ("COSS") have been prepared using the same spreadsheet models that have been used in past rate cases. Explain whether this statement indicates that all revenue and expense amounts in the COSSs filed in this proceeding have been allocated using the same allocation factors as used in the prior base rate proceeding. If no, provide the changes in the allocation factors and reasons for the changes.

A-107. The cost of service study spreadsheet model used by LG&E in this proceeding is the same model used in the prior proceedings in that no substantive changes to the structure or layout of the model have been performed. Subsequently, the allocation of revenue and expenses are the same as the prior rate proceeding with the exception of the energy and demand allocations in the LG&E Electric COSS. These allocators were adjusted to reflect the effect of rate switching for each customer class. Those adjustments can be found on pages 37 – 40 on Conroy Exhibit C3. While the results of the allocations are necessarily different, the methods used are consistent between the two studies.

Q-109. Refer to page 36 of the Conroy Testimony.

- a. Explain why DEM05 and DEM05a now define high pressure pipe at 60 psi and above and low- and medium-pressure pipe below 60 psi, when LG&E's previous COSS in Case No. 2009-00549<sup>9</sup> used 50 psi as the pressure above and below which this designation would be made.
- b. Explain any changes to allocations caused by the change from 50 to 60 psi as the pressure at which pipe is designated as low- and medium-pressure as
- c. opposed to high pressure.

A-109. a. The operational definition has always been 60 psi and above. The previous COSS in Case No. 2009-00549 referenced 50 psi and above to define high pressure pipe in a general sense.

- b. There are no changes.

A-112. The methodology used to calculate the increase in the Redundant Capacity charges is the same as that used in prior base rate proceedings.

- Q-113. Refer to page 66 of the Conroy Testimony. LG&E states that no customers have ever participated in the Real Time Pricing tariff, that the availability is limited to those have done so by November 30, 2010, and that LG&E proposes to eliminate the tariff. Explain whether LG&E incurs any costs to keep the tariff active. If so, provide a breakdown of the costs. If not, explain why LG&E is not requesting a change to the Availability section of the tariff continuing to permit customers to participate and providing additional tariff options to its customers.

Question No. 114

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-114. Refer to Conroy Exhibit P5.

- a. Explain why LG&E is using an adjustment for customer switching to calculate Actual kWh in column (4) in its Adjustment to Reflect Year End Number of Customers, and whether the level of rate switching experienced during the test year is significantly greater than in the past.
- b. Refer to page 4 of 8. Explain whether the eight months of kWh use in column (3) for Customer #4 should be 1,343,000 instead of 1,343.
- c. Refer to page 5 of 8. Explain why Customer #8 had no kWh usage during the two customer months and why this is projected to continue in the annualization of 0 usage.
- d. Refer to page 7 of 8. Column (4) is calculated by subtracting column (2) from, and adding column (3) to, column (1). Explain whether this results in column (4) representing a pre-switching rather than post-switching customer count. If yes, explain why the year-end customer adjustment should be calculated using a pre-switching count. If not, explain. If a correction is necessary, provide a revised Exhibit P5 and revisions of all exhibits that would be affected by this change.
- e. Likewise, if column (8) represents a pre-switching as opposed to post-switching energy usage, explain why this is correct. If any corrections are necessary, provide revisions to Exhibit P5 and all affected exhibits.
- f. Refer to page 7 of 8, the Power Service Secondary line. Explain why 857 customers switching TO the rate and their corresponding energy use in column (6) appears to be a combination of 855 customers and their energy use shown moving to Rate PS Secondary on page 3 of R5 and two customers shown moving to Rate PS Primary on page 4 of R5.

- A-114. a. LG&E calculated Actual kWh adjusted for rate switching in order to match the kWh to the customer count. If LG&E had adjusted only the customer count for rate switching, and not the corresponding kWh, the calculation of the average kWh per Customer per Year would be based on energy consumption by customers that had not been on the rate for 13 months, resulting in a misstated average calculation.
- b. Yes. See the response to Question No. 108 for a revised Conroy Exhibit P5 and associated workpapers. No additional exhibits are affected by the revision.
- c. The only data available to LG&E at the time the adjustment was prepared indicated no energy usage and minimum demand billings for the month of April beyond the end of the test year. Since no additional data was available to LG&E, there was no basis for inferring different usage.
- d. The amounts in Column 1 were incorrect. See response to part b.
- e. The amounts in Column 5 were incorrect. See response to part b.
- f. The PS Primary customers were inadvertently included with the PS Secondary customers in the development of Conroy Exhibit P5. The attached revised exhibit shows the correction. The pro forma adjustment changed by $32.

- A-115.
- a. The minimum system demand figure represents to lowest hourly total system demand recorded by the combined LG&E and KU system during the test year. This was calculated by finding the minimum or lowest hourly total system load served from the LG&E and KU via the hourly EMS system.

- a. Refer to pages 13 through 15 of 48. Explain the reasoning for using the PROFIX functional vector for accounts 551, 553, and 554.
- b. Refer to pages 43 through 45 of 48. Explain in detail how each of the following functional vectors was calculated: F015, F019, F020, F021, F022, F023, F024, and F027.

A-116. a. The PROFIX functional vector is a fixed production cost allocator based upon the BIP allocation methodology and accounts 551, 553, and 554 are fixed cost production maintenance accounts.

- b. F015 is a carryover from a previous study that is not used.

F019 is the sum of labor expenses charged to steam operation accounts 501, 502, 505, 506, and 507. F019 is used to allocate account 500 labor.

F020 is the sum of labor expenses charged to steam maintenance accounts 511, 512, 513, and 514. F020 is used to allocate account 510 labor.

F021 is the sum of labor expenses charged to hydro operation accounts 536, 537, 538, 539, and 540. F021 is used to allocate account 535 labor.

Explain where the first row of numbers on these pages, the Sales to Ultimate Consumers amounts by rate class, can be found in either Conroy Exhibit R4 or R5. If they cannot be found in those exhibits, explain how they were calculated.
- A-117. Sales to Ultimate Consumers is a financial amount that must be allocated to rate classes. See Conroy Exhibit C3, pages 37 through 38 of 42, the row labeled Revenue net of CSR. The revenues on this row are the sum of billing determinants revenues less CSR revenue credits plus buy-through energy charges. Q-118. Refer to Conroy Exhibit C3, page 29 through 30 of 42.

- a. Explain why, for the row "Annualized FAC roll-in to base rates", the amount in the "Residential Rate RS" column should not equal ($1,691,013), which is difference between the $(3,179,957) total for the Residential Rate in the "Twelve Month Total" column on Conroy Exhibit P2, page 3 of 3, and the $1,488,944 in the "Increased Revenue" column for the Residential Service on Conroy Exhibit P1, page 1 of 24.
- b. Explain why the individual class allocations for the "Annualized Year end customer revenues" adjustment on these pages do not reconcile with those on Conroy Exhibit P5, page 1 of 8.
- c. LG&E uses the allocation vector REV01 to allocate the "Annualized FAC roll-in to base rates" and "Adjustment to reflect changes to FAC calculations" pro-forma adjustments to the rate classes. In Case No. 2012-00221<sup>10</sup>, KU, LG&E's sister company, used the allocation vector FAC01 for the same pro-forma adjustments. Explain the reason for the use of different allocation vectors between the companies.

A-118. a. "Annualized FAC roll-in to base rates" is the net difference in revenues is calculated on Blake Exhibit 1, Schedule 1.02 and allocated to each rate class on the basis of the calculated difference in FAC revenues on Conroy Exhibit P2, page 3 of 3.

- b. "Annualized Year end customer revenues" is an allocation of the total year end customer revenue, based on year end customer counts. The allocation is used for both the revenue and the expense adjustments.

<sup>10</sup> Case No. 2012-00221, Application of Kentucky Utilities Company for an Adjustment of its Electric Rates, filed July 10, 2012.

- c. LG&E's allocation vector REV01 is the change in FAC revenues from Conroy Exhibit P2, page 3 of 3. KU's allocation vector FAC01 is the change in base rates from Conroy Exhibit P1. The difference in allocation methods is a carry-over from an earlier version of the spreadsheet models that does not have a material impact on the results of the studies.

Tot Dem = [77 DD x Temp Sens Sales & Tran] + Non Temp Sens Sales & Tran
Therefore, for Residential Rate RGS the Total Demand of 302,393 Mcfd is calculated as follows:

$$\begin{aligned}\text{Tot Dem} &= [77 \text{ DD} \times \text{Temp Sens Sales \& Tran}] + \text{Non Temp Sens Sales \& Tran} \\ &= [77 \text{ DD} \times 3,768.58 \text{ Mcfd}] + 12,212 \text{ Mcfd} \\ &= 302,393 \text{ Mcfd}\end{aligned}$$

Question No. 123

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-123. Refer to Conroy Exhibit C10, page 14 of 15. Explain the origin of the numbers in the DEM01 line, and why they are different from the numbers on the Total Demands (As Adjusted) line at the bottom of Exhibit C8, page 1.
- A-123. The Company used the information from the Total Demands line under "Calculated Daily Customer Deliveries (Demands) @ -12 Degrees (77 Degree Days)" on Exhibit C8, creating the difference from the numbers on the Total Demands (As Adjusted) at the bottom of Exhibit C8. Upon further review, the Company agrees that the Cost of Service Study should use the As Adjusted Demands.

Question No. 124

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-124. Refer to Conroy Exhibit R5. Explain why LG&E is not using the Correction Factor in columns (5) and (6) as it has in the past, or if the Correction Factor is actually 1.00.

A-124. The Correction Factors are 1.00.

Question No. 125

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

- Q-125. Refer to page 20 of Conroy Exhibit R5. LG&E is proposing an increase of 21.5 percent for the Coach Acorn, 9500 Lumen, Fixture Only High Pressure Sodium lights, from $13.99 to $17.00. The average increase for the lighting classes is 5.01 percent. Explain the reason for the proposed higher increases to the referenced lights.
- A-125. The 100W HP lights currently priced at $13.99 per month are the same type of light as the lights currently priced at $17.68 or $17.49 per month. LG&E calculated its proposed rate for these four light categories using a weighted average of the total test year revenue for the four lights divided by total number of lights in the four categories, multiplied by the average proposed revenue increase for Rate LS.

Question No. 126

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-126. Refer to Conroy Exhibit R8, page 1.

- a. Provide the calculations and assumptions underlying the proposed Administrative Charge for Rate TS, FT, and TS-2 customers.
- b. Explain which costs are currently incurred on behalf of these customers, and the extent to which these are anticipated new costs due to the proposed expansion of transportation service availability.
- c. Provide the calculation for the $592 Rider TS charge through October 31, 2013.

A-126. a. See the response to Question No. 108. See also the response to Question No. 22(f).

b. All of the costs are currently being incurred by LG&E. See also the response to Question No. 22(f).

c. The fully allocated cost of $619 applicable to customers under Rate FT and Rider TS-2 both of which have telemetry was reduced by $27 to determine the $592 applicable to Rider TS customers through October 31, 2013. This amount of $592 is calculated by summing the costs associated with the Eagle Talon Data Acquisition System required for telemetered customers ($2,900 plus $22,006) and dividing by the number of Rate FT and Rider TS billing determinants (919 billing units during the test year) to produce $27. This amount of $27 is netted against the fully allocated cost of $619 as shown on Conroy Exhibit R8 to yield $592 for Rider TS customers. This amount of $27 is removed because customers under Rider TS do not have access to telemetry. See also the response to Question No. 126(a) and Question No. 22(f).

Question No. 127

Responding Witness: Robert M. Conroy

Q-127. Refer to Conroy Exhibit M5, page 1 of 3.

- a. State whether the installed costs shown on this schedule are gross or net investment costs. If gross costs, explain why net costs were not used.
- b. In LG&E's most recent rate proceeding, Case No. 2009-00549<sup>11</sup>, the calculation of the CATV attachment charges included a two-user pole cost as well as a three user pole cost. Explain why only a three user pole cost is included in the calculation in this proceeding.

A-127. a. Consistent with the use of a levelized carrying charge rate – as opposed to a non-levelized carrying charge rate – the installed cost figures represent gross plant in service values.

- b. Prior to the most recent LG&E rate proceeding, Case No. 2009-00549, LG&E charged a different monthly rate for 2 user pole attachments and 3 user pole attachments. As a part of the settlement stipulation in the previous case, LG&E was granted a single pole attachment charge of $5.35 per attachment per year, thus eliminating the annual charge difference between two user and three user pole attachments. Since LG&E currently charges that single rate, a single rate was calculated based upon the three user pole attachment usage space factor of 0.0759 as shown on Conroy Exhibit M5, page 1 of 3. This usage factor was chosen as it is more conservative than the two user pole attachment usage space factor of 0.1224, thus resulting in a lower per unit rate for pole attachment customers.
