Boone County election season is personal

Chris Mayhew Cincinnati Enquirer USA TODAY NETWORK

A showdown for the job of Boone County's top elected official has spilled across social media this spring ahead of the May 22 primary election.

The winner of the two Republican candidates will face no opposition on the Nov. 6 General Election ballot.

Longtime Boone County Judge-executive Gary Moore's challenger is political newcomer Chris Reinersman.

Reinersman, a Union resident, is not related to independence Meyor Chris Reinersman.

Moore publicly ignored Reinersman's stream of Facebook attack videos and posts this spring until recently. Reinersman accused Moore's "political machine" of being behind the website chrisreinerman.com. The website slams Reinersman for 20th personal bankruptcy that led to county taxes not being paid.

Moore's campaign denied any involvement in the website detailing the bankruptcy.

No proof of Moore's involvement isn't stopping Reinersman from calling foul

"A reasonable person can think he may be behind something," Reinersman said about Moore and the bankruptcy website. Boone County's judge-executive for 19 years doesn't shy away from talking about Reinaraman's personal bankruptcy. Creditors in the bankruptcy were oved $572.000.

"The bankruptcy is relevant to this race." Moore said.

Acting as judge-executive means overseeing about $100 million annually in Boone County, he said.
