STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Man charged in rape now accused of killing woman

HAZARD - A Kentucky man charged with rape is now charged with murder in the death of a woman whose body was found in a park over the weekend.

News outlets reported 45-year-old Anthony Lewis was arrested Monday in the death of 37-year-old Marlena Holland, who was found apparently beaten to death Sunday. He was set to stand trial Wednesday on an unrelated charge of rape.

Court records said Lewis has an extensive criminal history, including a 1995 kidnapping conviction. WYMT-TV reported Lewis and another man were accused of robbing, kidnapping and killing someone in 1992.

Lewis was paroled in 2017 and accused in the rape just months later. He posted bail and was out of custody awaiting Wednesday's trial when he was arrested Monday.

State health officials won't ban tattoos over scars

FRANKFORT, Ky. - A proposal to ban tattooing on scarred skin will fade away after Kentucky health officials backed off the proposed regulation.

State officials said Tuesday that updated regulations for tattoo studios will move forward without the proposed ban on tattoos over scars. The Cabinet for Health and Family Services said it received more than 600 public comments on the matter.

The cabinet said there's a lack of "available evidence to support" the proposed ban. The proposal drew a backlash from groups that said the proposed rule was unwarranted and unfair.

In May, health officials said the issue needed more review.

Under the new rules governing tattoo parlors, a person registering as a tattoo artist will have to complete blood-borne pathogen training. The cabinet also updated the disinfectant and equipment sterilization process.

Man has tick removed from eye after tree removal work

PRESTONSBURG, Ky. - A Kentucky man who went to the doctor with an irritated eye got the unsavory news that it contained a tick.

WYMT-TV reported an optometrist used tweezers to remove the tick from Chris Prater's eye.

Prater works for an electric company and had left a job site where his crew had removed a tree from power lines when his eye started bothering him.

He noticed a tiny spot on his eye and tried to flush it several times to no avail. Finally, he went to the doctor and admits he got "scared a little bit" at the diagnosis.

After numbing Prater's eye, the doctor removed the tick. Prater was sent home with antibiotics and steroid drops.

Police make prostitution busts at 2 massage parlors

BOWLING GREEN - Police made arrests at two Kentucky massage parlors they say were operating as prostitution spots.

News outlets reported Bowling Green police charged four massage workers over the weekend at Blue Sky Spa and Lavender Massage.

At both, police said, they were alerted to suspicious behavior then found the phone numbers in sex advertisements online. The arrest citations detail detectives monitored the locations and noticed all customers were men.

At Blue Sky Spa, the records state investigators found evidence of sex acts and arrested owner Huadi Chen, who denied performing sex acts.

Chen was charged with promoting prostitution, endangerment and practicing without a license.

At Lavender massage, two workers were charged with engaging in organized crime and practicing without a license. Owner Li Jionggang was also charged with promoting prostitution.

Louisville officers won't serve in schools this fall

LOUISVILLE - Schools in Kentucky's largest city won't have Louisville

Metro Police acting as resource officers when classes begin this fall.

The Courier-Journal reported the decision by the agency is due to the city's $35 million budget deficit. The decision comes as school districts around the state are working to meet requirements of a new school safety law that includes a target for having a resource officer in every school.

Although other police agencies will fill some gaps, the newspaper reported at least 17 schools won't have a returning resource officer.

Superintendent Marty Pollio has said the district could use night-shift security officers. School district documents show the Jefferson County Board of Education will discuss school safety at a July 30 retreat, before voting on a safety plan Aug. 6.

Family teamwork saves young girl's life

By Kenton Hornbeck, Reporter

A weekend of relaxation and family fun turned scary for Pendleton County residents Susan and Kenny Gibson over this Fourth of July weekend. A three-year-old girl fell into a pool during a holiday cookout in Crittenden.

Both Susan and Kenny swiftly acted to save the girl from potentially drowning. The girl was pulled out of the swimming pool and had a severe difficulty breathing.

"I work at dispatch, so I've had to give instructions over the phone lots of times," said Susan. "I've taught CPR classes for several years but never had to perform it on a real person until that night."

Susan, Kenny and Renee Gibson all performed CPR on the child until her breathing returned back to normal levels.

It was fortunate the girl's family was properly trained and certified in CPR along with the fact that Susan works as a dispatcher.

Kenny works in search-and-rescue as well as being a volunteer firefighter.

Renee, who is the child's grandmother, is a registered nurse.

"We couldn't have had a better combination of people there to help her," said Susan.

After the frightening situation was quelled, she was airlifted by Air Evacuation 133 to Children's Hospital where she made a full recovery.
