Interview with Carlisle Police Chief Bill Denton

By Michael Clary
KyNewsGroup
michael@kynewsgroup.com

On Friday afternoon, August 11, 2023, I spoke by phone with Carlisle Chief of Police Bill Denton about a few issues. Regarding the recent retirements and resignations of the entire Carlisle Police force, Chief Denton confirmed that he would be the only one staying on. He told me that Officer Gary Kinder would be retiring on Sat., August 12, 2023, and that Sgt. Matt Royse and K-9 Officer Drew Merrill had submitted their resignations, with their last day being on Tues., August 15, 2023. A Facebook post over the weekend on the Carlisle Police Department – Kentucky Facebook page confirmed the retirements of both Officer Jeff Lizer and Officer Gary Kinder. Officer Lizer had 42 years of Law Enforcement service having served the communities of Paris/Bourbon County and Carlisle/Nicholas County. The post remarked, “His dedication and experience will be very much missed in the day-to-day operations of this department.” The post also mentioned Officer Kinder “who is also retiring today after a very rewarding career.” Chief Denton mentions that he had a total of 7 officers altogether, and that all of them would be gone, pending resignations and retirements, except for him. I asked Chief Denton if the resignations were all because the city would not pay hazard pay, and that if any compromise was made to try to get the officers to stay on, and he said that I would have to speak with the resigning officers to find out exactly why they left and under what circumstances. I asked what the city was doing to bring in more officers to help out, and he said the city was currently in the hiring process and looking at applications. Mayor Ronnie Clark mentioned in Monday evening’s City Council meeting that he was hoping to have 2 officers hired by the end of the week. I asked Chief Denton on the phone, that until he receives those new officers, would he be working hand-in-hand with Nicholas County Sheriff

Jeff Sidles and the Kentucky State Police, and he remarked, “That is correct.” Due to the shortage of officers here in Carlisle, there will be random patrols throughout the city, and don’t be surprised if the Sheriff or the KSP show up to a local call, standing in for the Carlisle Police Department. I then asked about the recent WKYT News Investigation regarding the Cheyenne Clifford case. Chief Denton remarked, “I officially have no comment on WKYT’s investigation.” WKYT had a news investigation this past week regarding a 911 call that was called into dispatch regarding a red Dodge truck “all over the roadway” and with “passengers hanging out the window.” Carlisle Police Officer Jamie Copher located the vehicle at Shell gas station at 9:49 P.M. and issued a verbal warning to Mr. Clifford, a few hours before the deadly crash that killed Nathaniel Welch and Gage Gaunce and injured two others, while Mr. Clifford only sustained minor injuries. An indictment handed down by the Nicholas County Grand Jury on June 19, 2023, included 11 total charges, including No/Expired Registration Plates and Failure of Owner to Maintain Required Insurance – First Offense, amongst the 11 charges. Upon watching the news clip, the WKTY News Investigation left out a lot of important details, including the fact that after being pulled over in Carlisle, Mr. Clifford and his passengers drove to the Gyp Joint located in Pleasant Valley in Nicholas County. Surviving passenger Emily Earlywine told Nicholas County Sheriff Jeff Sidles that Mr. Clifford was drinking heavily at the Gyp Joint in Pleasant Valley in Nicholas County, for approximately an hour, while the other 4 passengers were not permitted inside. An altercation inside the establishment angered Mr. Clifford, and he and his occupants left. The crash happened just a few minutes later. Cheyeene R. Clifford is currently being held in the Bourbon County Detention Center on a $500,000.00 cash bond.

Cane poles create lifelong memories for mountain kids

BY ROGER ALFORD

A lady asked a clerk in the bookstore where the outdoor magazines are. "It's right over there," the clerk said. "Is there anything in particular you're looking for?" "Yes," she replied. "My husband."

I can't begin to tell you how much I've enjoyed outdoor magazines over the years. As a child, I fell in love with Outdoor Life and Field and Stream.

I loved reading the great adventures of those writers. They hunted grizzlies. They hunted African lions. They hunted antelopes. They hunted upland birds. They hunted all kinds of waterfowl, the likes of which I had never seen in person.

They'd describe their guns that just couldn't miss, Weatherbys and Benellis and the like. They fished for peacock bass in the Amazon. They went after swordfish in the oceans of the world. Sometimes, they pulled giant sturgeon out of vast northern lakes.

Then there was me, a mountain boy whose great outdoor adventures involved hunting squirrels and rabbits back behind the house or fishing for sun grannies in the creek.

I had a single-barrel Stevens for hunting and a cane pole for fishing. But, oh, did I ever have fun.

A simple life is a wonderful thing. Proverbs 15:16 tells us it's better to have little than to have great treasure and the trouble that comes with it.

Those men with those guns that cost thousands of dollars or fishing reels that ran into hundreds of dollars always had to be aware that thieves might break in and steal them. So, no doubt, they bought unbreakable safes to protect their expensive equipment. Sounds like a great deal of trouble.

Me, I propped my Stevens in a corner without worry because no one else would want the thing. My cane pole, I'd lean against the cellar wall. No one ever took it. After all, cane poles grew like weeds all along the creek banks.

I miss those carefree days of childhood when all it took was a single-shot shotgun and a cane pole to create lifelong outdoor memories.

On hot summer days, when the sun grannies were biting, I'd be on the creek bank, cane pole in hand.

When squirrels started cutting scalybark hickories in mid-August, I'd be sitting beneath them with my single shot across my lap.

In the same way the woman knew her husband would be in the outdoor section of the bookstore, my parents always knew exactly where to find me.

Stewart, a member of the Panthers football team, officer in FFA and a cheerleader, was also a student at the Carroll County Area Technology Center in Carrollton. He was scheduled to begin his junior year of high school at Carroll County on Wednesday.

The school district issued a statement later on Sunday in response to the unexpected death. "It is difficult to process and cope with the loss of such a young, vital life," said Carroll County Schools

Superintendent Casey Jaynes. "Our heartfelt thoughts and prayers are with this young man's family."

The school district also announced that the Carroll County High School campus and football field would be open to students beginning at noon on Monday, Aug. 14, beginning at noon. Amy Sutter, principal at the high school, said she wanted students to know they have a "safe space to gather, grieve or just be" and that adults will be available for the students.

Born July 11, 2007 in Madison, Indiana, Stewart was a son of Robert Jordan Stewart and Jami Rae Hoskins Beach. He was a member of LaGrange Baptist Church and attended Union Grove Church.

"Bryce was a dedicated Carroll County Panther with an eat, sleep and breathe football attitude," family members said in his obituary. "He was an avid outdoorsman, whether it was farming, hunting deer, turkey, and coyotes or fishing and frog gigging. He was always busy doing something."

Calling hours and a funeral service were held earlier this week at Family Worship Center. Pall bearers were coach Jay Montgomery and members of the football team.

Meanwhile, a GoFundMe account for funeral expenses was established on Sunday and by Tuesday had raised more than $7,000.

Major League Baseball Pitch Hit & Run is a free event that provides boys and girls — ages 7 to 14 — an opportunity to showcase their baseball and softball skills, while earning a chance to attend and perform during the MLB World Series.

Athletes are tested, and their measurements are recorded. Based on their scores, athletes advance from a local event to a Team Championship held in MLB stadiums. Top scores then qualify for an all-expenses-paid trip for two to compete at the National Finals, which is hosted at the World Series.

ELDER LAW

Why You Should Designate Beneficiaries (Part 2)

If you have any of the following, check to ensure you have the person or persons you want to receive the assets listed as beneficiaries (continued next month).

- Retirement accounts – In addition to traditional IRAs and Roth IRAs, there are other types of IRAs, such as SEP IRAs and SIMPLE IRAs. Reviewing the beneficiary designations on all types of retirement accounts is essential.
- Annuities – Annuities provide regular payments to individuals over time, typically as a source of retirement income. Most plans allow you to select one or multiple beneficiaries.
- Pension Plans – If you pass away before retirement, some pension plans provide lump sum payments to named surviving loved ones.
- Bank accounts – Pay-on-death or transfer-on-death bank accounts allow you to list beneficiaries who assume ownership of your account after you pass away. This is different from a joint account, where you and another person both own the assets. In a pay-on-death account, your beneficiary takes ownership after you pass. You can add and change beneficiaries directly through your financial institution.
- Investment accounts – Like other financial accounts, investment accounts can be transferred to a recipient upon the owner's death.
- Health savings accounts – You can obtain the necessary form to transfer your health savings account by contacting your HSA provider or visiting their website.
- Life insurance policies – Those with life insurance policies typically select who will receive the payment when they establish their policy. However, policyholders should remember to review and update their plans when circumstances change, such as after a divorce or death.
- House – When you create a transfer-on-death deed, you can transfer your house upon your death and bypass probate. For older adults, this can be a safer option than adding someone to the deed, as it preserves their full ownership of the property until death.
- Car – Certain states allow people to name a transfer-on-death beneficiary for their vehicles.
- Business Interests – If you own a business, be sure to review partnership agreements, shareholder agreements, or operating agreements for transfer provisions.
- Digital Assets – Some online platforms allow you to assign someone to manage your digital accounts after your death.

Multiple Beneficiaries and Successors
In many cases, you may name more than one beneficiary. For instance, a person with two children might want to leave an asset to them both. Depending on the type of asset, you can state how much of the asset each child receives.

It is also vital to consider successor beneficiaries. A successor obtains the asset if the original recipient passes away. For instance, you could list a beneficiary and a successor on a pay-on-death account.

Changing Beneficiaries
You can change whom you listed as a beneficiary as your relationships and circumstances evolve. When you designate a beneficiary on an asset such as an account, they assume ownership only after you die. Generally, they will not have an ownership interest while you are alive and can handle your own affairs.

Elder Law Estate Planning Attorney
Organizing your assets to plan for the future can be challenging and complex. With the help of an elder law estate planning attorney, you can develop a solid plan to distribute your assets to your loved ones according to your wishes. An elder law estate planning attorney near you can help you review your assets and name beneficiaries as part of creating a robust estate plan.
