infectious disease expert affiliated with UC Health and Cincinnati Children's.

Dr. Denise Saker, interim medical director for the Cincinnati Health Department.

We paraphrased answers for clarity.

Would you have your child wear a mask to prevent getting pneumonia now?

Balster: If my child were at a higher risk for severe illness and I were aware of a significant rise of respiratory illness within the school, then yes. However, overall hygiene plays just as significant of a role in the spread of respiratory diseases.

Use a song to make washing hands more enjoyable for kids. SAM UPSHAW JR./COURIER JOURNAL

Saker: I would consider it for airplane travel, and certainly for visiting the elderly or immunocompromised, and when going to the hospital or health center.

Huson: Routine mask-wearing is not recommended to prevent pneumonia. However, you can consider this if you will be around others who are sick (at a doctor's office or pharmacy) or in very crowded areas.

Would you supervise hand washing for kids under age 10, or review how to do it every so often?

Koenig: I would remind them to sing the Happy Birthday song twice and when to wash their hands.

Danziger-Isakov: Yes, periodically. Make it fun: Use songs, a timer, special soaps, towels they like.

We often hear, 'you'll get sick' if you go outside in cold weather. What's the truth?

Jimison: Cold weather does not cause a cold. But, during colder months, more people gather indoors where illnesses can spread more

"Pneumonia presents with a significant cough and prolonged fever."

Balster: Cold weather has been shown to reduce the effectiveness of the immune system. However, human behavior is much more important in driving human illness. Staying inside, huddling together, forgetting to wash hands – that's the kind of behavior that can drive the spread of illness.

Is there a vaccine for pneumonia prevention for kids? If so, should my kid get it?

Danziger-Isakov: Many infections can cause pneumonia, including viruses like influenza, respiratory syncytial virus, commonly called RSV, or COVID-19, and bacteria illnesses, such as pneumococcus. Vaccines for influenza and COVID-19 are recommended for kids as young as 6 months. Prevnar, a routinely recommended vaccine for kids, protects against pneumococcus bacteria.

When would you take your child to a hospital emergency ## department or their pediatrician?

Koenig: Given the increased pneumonia cases in Warren County, parents should take their children to their primary care provider if they have a fever and cough.

Huson: Call your doctor immediately if your child has a worsening cough, fever, shortness of breath, wheezing, or lots of choking.

Danziger-Isakov: If your child is ill or unable to keep themselves hydrated, reach out to your pediatrician. They can help you decide how urgent it is to seek care and where to take your child. If you believe your child is having an emergency, call 911.

Miller-Handley: As long as your child is eating, drinking and breathing appropriately, it's OK to keep them at home. If your child has a prolonged fever (more than five days) or fever returns a few days after symptom improvement, or a persistent cough, consider seeing your pediatrician. If your child has shortness of breath, significant reduced urine output, or changes in mental function, take them to the emergency department.

Can I determine whether my child has pneumonia?

Jimison: Sometimes a physician can diagnose by signs and symptoms. Other times diagnostic tests, such as blood or spit tests or a chest x-ray may be used.

Huson: Any suspicion of pneumonia needs to be seen by a doctor.

Handley-Miller: Pneumonia presents with a significant cough and prolonged fever. Children should see their primary care provider if there is any concern about pneumonia.

What haven't we asked?

Jimison: Basic infection prevention strategies to keep you healthy include washing your hands regularly, covering your cough, cleaning and disinfecting surfaces, staying home when ill, and staying up to date on vaccinations.

Saker: Check in with your child's healthcare provider early on. Home remedies such as saline nose spray, a fever and pain reducer, drinking plenty of liquids, and using a cool mist humidifier go a long way to support the child's recovery.

Sittenfeld

Carter Stewart, who previously headed the same U.S. Attorney's Office that prosecuted Sittenfeld and an appointee of former President Barack Obama, said Sittenfeld was convicted based on conduct "that was not criminal."

Sittenfeld is scheduled to report to prison Jan. 2 to begin serving a 16-month sentence. The sentence was handed down in October, more than a year after a jury in federal court in Cincinnati found him guilty of bribery and attempted extortion.

In a Nov. 30 ruling, the 6th Circuit denied a request by Sittenfeld's attorneys to allow him to remain out of prison while his appeal is pending.

Sittenfeld's convictions involved $20,000 in payments from undercover FBI agents to his political action committee.

Prosecutors said Sit-tenfeld, a Democrat, used his position of power within local government to extract financial contributions from people who regularly conducted city business. Sittenfeld, they said, made clear that his support for their city business was tied directly to their contributions to him.

"This is not faithful public service or even 'politics as usual' – this is corruption," prosecutors said in documents filed in advance of his sentencing.

'An Alice-in-Wonderland world'

The brief filed on behalf of five law professors said Sittenfeld is facing prison time, despite having rejected the undercover agent's offer to contribute to his campaign if Sittenfeld promised to support a development project.

Sittenfeld refused that offer, saying it would be illegal and that "nothing can be a quid pro quo."

If "rejecting a quid pro quo means accepting it, then we are in an Alice-in-Wonderland world where words have no meaning," the law professors' brief says.

Federal prosecutors have not yet filed a response to the appeal. But during the trial they said Sittenfeld agreed to a quid pro quo, promising to vote in support of the project in exchange for tens of thousands of dollars to his political action committee.

ANSWER TO TUESDAY'S PUZZLE:

CAROLYN HAX
Family struggles with relative's divorces

BY CAROLYN HAX
 tellme@washpost.com

Dear Carolyn: In discussing an in-law's third wedding (bit.ly/WifeNo3), you said it's "neither your business nor of significant consequence to you."
 As someone whose brother-in-law has divorced three times, I disagree. Three times we have welcomed these women into our homes, our lives, our children's and now our grandchildren's lives. Three times we have been supportive and treated them as family members, loving them and opening our hearts to them, only for him to find fault with each and then remove them from all our lives.

To say it is of no significant consequence to us discounts the feelings of supportive family members, including children.

Been There: That is fair. In service of expediency and my word count, I cut out the nuance. I'm happy to put it back in now.

The none-of-your-business part needs no elaboration. You don't have standing to object to a divorce just because your kids love the soon-to-be ex.

sequences are real, of course, and they matter. The meaning of "significant" is what I omitted.
 Pain is obviously significant. The more attached you get, the more a separation hurts.

But the type of pain matters, too. Having your own marriage or nuclear family dissolve is the hurt of missed opportunities, regretted choices, carried grudges, broken promises.
 What you describe is different: It's the relatively straightforward hurt of absence. That's where I was (and still am) coming from in my opinion.

And I treat the two differently because this one is the kind of hurt we deal with routinely. Here's a noninclusive list of analogous goodbyes and absences: relocations, graduations, layoffs, transfers, resignations, retirements, deaths, growings-up, non-divorce breakups, quittings of activities, completions of a performance run or sports season or career.

hearts to others constantly with the tacit risk that it'll be temporary. And not just because life itself is temporary, but that's in play, too.

If you're going to hold it against your brother-in-law that his personal struggle, whatever it may be, involves marriages that don't stick, then have at it.

But there's also nothing to stop you from including the ebb and flow of wives in the same category you file the colleague you bonded with over 10 years in adjacent cubicles; or the neighbors who helped you pass dozens of restorative hours around the fire pit they pitched in to build; or the high school teammate who saw you through everything, whom you'll never forget, and whom you haven't seen outside of a reunion in 20 years. Meaningful connections followed by heart-rending goodbyes, every one of them, when the time comes. Aren't they just your brother-in-law's divorces, but with no one to blame except time?

So I'd call the consequences of a multiply divorced sibling significant, but no more so than of partings of other kinds.

Seahawks stun Eagles with TD pass to rookie WR

Field Level Media

Drew Lock fired a 29-yard touchdown pass to Jaxon Smith-Njigba with 28 seconds remaining to give the Seattle Seahawks a dramatic 20-17 victory over the visiting Philadelphia Eagles on Monday night.

Starting with 1:52 left, Lock drove the Seahawks 92 yards on 10 plays, hitting DK Metcalf for 34 yards along the way. Smith-Njigba later beat Eagles cornerback James Bradberry to make the scoring catch and help Seattle (7-7) halt a four-game losing streak.

Seattle's Julian Love made two interceptions in the fourth quarter, including the game-clincher with six seconds left. The Seahawks never led until Lock's TD throw to Smith-Njigba.

Jalen Hurts rushed for two touchdowns to equal the NFL single-season record, but the Eagles (10-4) lost their third consecutive game. With his second score on the ground, Hurts raised his season total to 14 and matched Cam Newton (2011) for the one-year record for rushing touchdowns by a quarterback.

Hurts played despite battling an illness that reportedly led him to fly to Seattle separately from the team. He connected on 17 of 31 passes for 143 yards and the two interceptions, and he added a team-high 82 rushing yards on 13 carries for Philadelphia.

JOE NICHOLSON USA TODAY NETWORK

Seattle Seahawks wide receiver Jaxon Smith-Njigba celebrates with fans after a victory against the Philadelphia Eagles on Monday in Seattle.

Lock completed 22 of 33 passes for 208 yards and one touchdown in his second straight start for the Seahawks. He played in place of Geno Smith (groin), who was active for the game but didn't play for the second straight game.

Kenneth Walker III ran for 86 yards and a touchdown on 19 carries and Metcalf caught five passes for 78 yards for Seattle.

D'Andre Swift rushed for 74 yards on 18 carries for the Eagles.

The Eagles used the "Tush Push" to take a 17-10 lead as Hurts plunged in from the Seattle 1-yard line with 4:43 left in the third quarter.

The Seahawks cut their deficit to four when Jason Myers kicked a 43-yard field goal with 10 minutes remaining in the game.

Philadelphia opened the contest with a 15-play,

75-yard touchdown drive that took 8:29. Hurts finished it with a 3-yard keeper.

The Eagles increased their lead to 10-0 when Jake Elliott booted a 27-yard field goal with 6:20 left in the first half.

The Seahawks got on the board when Myers kicked a 26-yard field goal with 1:42 remaining in the half.

Seattle knotted the score at 10 when Walker broke loose on a 23-yard scamper with 10:05 left in the third quarter.
