Raiders WR Adams leaves practice with apparent leg injury

BY MARK ANDERSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

HENDERSON, Nev. — Las Vegas Raiders wide receiver Davante Adams limped off the practice field Friday with what appeared to be a leg injury, but coach Josh McDaniels said he didn't "think it was crazy serious."

Adams, who has made first-team All-Pro each of the past three seasons, was injured during the Raiders' joint practice with the San Francisco 49ers.

"It was a bang-bang play," McDaniels said. "Totally clean on their side."

In his first season with the Raiders last year, Adams caught 100 passes for 1,516 yards and 14 touchdowns. He became one of the NFL's top receivers in his first seven seasons with the Green Bay Packers, before being traded to Las Vegas.

Orioles broadcaster Brown: 'All good here in Birdland'

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
SEATTLE — Baltimore

Orioles broadcaster Kevin Brown says all is well between him and team management.

Brown posted on social media on Friday in his first public comments since he reportedly was pulled from the air in late July over comments regarding the team's poor record at Tampa Bay before this season. The Orioles have said Brown will be back on the air soon.

"O's fans — I'm a storyteller. And never want to be a part of the story," Brown posted on Friday.

"The most compelling story in baseball right now is the story of the league-leading Baltimore Orioles — the best, most exciting young team in the American League."
