Russell Creek Missionary Baptist Church, 1998

Russell Creek Missionary Baptist Church

Russell Creek Missionary Baptist Church in Green County, Kentucky traces its origins to informal gatherings held as early as 1855. Those early services were held at Camp Branch in a log schoolhouse known as the Davis School. On the first Saturday of December 1868, the church was formally constituted as Russell Creek United Baptist Church by Bro. William M. Kidd, a member of Trammell Creek Baptist Church.

The original congregation consisted of 26 charter members, many of whom received letters from Trammell Creek Baptist Church.

The first church building was a modest 26 x 30 ft. log structure, built about half a mile east of the current site. Services were held on the fourth Saturday and Sunday of each month.

In July 1869, the church purchased one acre of land on the banks of Little Russell Creek from Thomas D. Moran for $8.00. Trustees at the time included Thomas A. Strader, John F. McKinney, and Joel M. Curry. The church grew steadily. Bro. William M. Kidd served as the first pastor for five years, during which time 34 members joined by experience and baptism, and 20 by letter.

Subsequent pastors included Bro. James Franklin Bloyd Sr. and Bro. Samuel Hardy. Each contributed to the church's spiritual growth, with revivals and baptisms marking their tenures. A notable revival in September 1879, assisted by Elder J. W. Pierce, led to 18 professions of faith.

In 1889, the church voted to build a new meeting house. The original building was sold to help fund the new construction, which was completed in 1890 on land donated by James M. Curry along the Grab-Donansburg Road, two and a half miles east of Donansburg. The dedication service was held in November 1890, led by Bros. J. A. and W. L. Pierce.

The church underwent name changes: in 1899, it became Russell Creek United Baptist of Kentucky, and in September 1913, it adopted the name, Russell Creek Missionary Baptist Church.

Wednesday night Bible classes began in 1954, followed by a transition to half-time services in 1964. This eventually led to full-time services being established in 1980.

Physical improvements made over the years to benefit the congregation include wiring for electricity in 1949, paneling in 1980, aluminum siding in 1985, bathrooms in 1990, a homecoming shelter in 1997 (enclosed in 2000), and Sunday School rooms in 1998.

By 2006, the church had grown to 146 members.

From its humble beginnings in a log schoolhouse, to a thriving congregation, Russell Creek Missionary Baptist Church stands as a testament to enduring faith and community.

As recorded in 1879 and echoed today: "Brethren pray for us that we may continue to prosper in the Lord."
