If you would like your comment to be considered by the Commission as part of the current KU rate proceeding (which does not involve the new gas-fired power plant under construction in Louisville), please provide your full name.

Thank you.

Electric power plants have not been told by anyone, anything, anybody here in the public to switch to natural gas. Maybe the big bosses did or the board. If they did it was for their gain. This was their idea therefore the company should be footing the cost. They should pay for this by using all the money they say they will be saving by by not buying more costly coal.

They want to make the rate payers foot the bill so they stick the profits in their own bank accounts.

It is time they spent their own profits on their own wishes.
