Gentlemen:

Utility companies all too frequently apply for a rate increase, get it, soon sell out to someone else, who then applies for a rate increase. The new company gets its rate increase, the company soon changes hands and it all starts over. Rates keep going up and up and even though we try to be conservative in our usage our bills also keep going up and up.

We live on Social Security, so we must be mindful of every expense. We also understand business, as we had our own company for over thirty years. Some expenses companies have to absorb, not just run asking for others to subsidize. If we needed a new service truck we had to make our own arrangements and pay for it from our own income.

Utility rates just seem to be getting out of control and we feel we must protest.

Yours truly,

Wally and Freeda Johnson
