As a resident of Lexington, I have been subject to several utility-related rate increases in the past few years, which come nowhere near to the amount of pay increases I earn. If the cost of living continues to rise, Lexington will see a large rift between the "haves" and "have-nots." This rate increase is not the way to build a strong community- it does the opposite. Kentucky Utilities should first examine their waste and decrease that before asking for even more monies from their customers. One suggestion is to send billing statements out in black and white rather than color. Another would be to cease printing and sending a newsletter with every statement- provide them online instead.
