In regards to the electric lines that have been proposed to go through the Allen property: There are other routes available that are both shorter and that would be less expensive. It would be an injustice not to consider these other options, which would seem to be both more reasonable and more affordable. In addition, there are caves on the Allen property that are used by Indiana bats for winter hibernation. They have been included on both state and federal lists as an endangered species, and the installation of electric lines on the Allen property could present a danger to their survival.

I would appreciate your consideration of these alternative routes for the proposed electric lines.

Sincerely,

Janice Carter
