Dear Public Service Commission,

I support the comment submitted by Kentuckians for Energy Democracy.

LG&E continues to support CUSTOMER HOSTILE policies. LG&E is making it very clear in their closing ALL, that's right ALL, customer service offices, that CUSTOMERS ARE TO SHUT UP and keep SENDING MONEY.....NO Questions form the customer.....ONLY response wanted from a customer is $$$$$.

Thank you for ensuring that Kentuckians' voices are an important part of the regulatory process.

Dear Public Service Commission,

We know that the time to transition off of fossil fuels is now. It's not smart for us to lock ourselves into paying for 40 more years of gas if we are going to have to turn around and invest in something cleaner in the next few years anyways. instead of considering any what is "least cost" right now. Let's look at what is least cost in the long run, energy efficiency and renewables. Let's think long term!

Sincerely,
Ben Saygers

Dear Public Service Commission,

I am a grandparent who has been watching the development of more frequent and severe weather events with fear for my grandchildren. I am aware of the acidification of the oceans and their temperature rise. We already are experience the effects of global warming and we must do everything we can as quickly as we can, or humanity is doomed. At the very best we are headed to an expensive and miserable future. There is no time to waste. New gas fired plants will either become stranded assets and in the mean-time, worsen global warming.

On a personal level I have switched from gas heat to a heat pump, bought an electric car and am installing solar panels. Not everyone can do this, which is why it is important for the utilities to take this seriously and do it now.

It is good that KU and LG&E will be closing two coal plants but replacing them with gas is fool hardy. The solution is solar, wind, and storage along with encouraging roof-top solar and increased energy efficiency. The 1% cap on roof-top solar must be eliminated.

Renewables are already more cost-effective, which will benefit low-income customers. However, the utilities only see profits and will have to be forced to go down this path. In the long run, the cost to consumers of climate change and gas fired plants will swamp the cost of renewables.

The PSC is the only entity at this point that can act in the interest of consumers and all of humanity. You must insist that they replace the coal plants with renewable and expand their networks to access more renewable energy. If Texas can do it, so can we.

This means a lot to me. Thank you for ensuring that Kentuckians' voices are an important part of the regulatory process.

Sincerely,
Ray Barry

Dear Public Service Commission,

I read a LOT about science including climate change. We are stepping into the future now and that future needs less carbon fuel and more climate friendly energy. Please do NOT spend money on gas plants. Instead focus on solar. I'm so glad two coal plants have reached end of life. The time is now to replace them with solar. Gas is not as bad but I don't see it as the solution. We have a planet and grandchildren to protect!

Dear Public Service Commission,

I support the comment submitted by Kentuckians for Energy Democracy.

This is an opportune time to invest in the future sustainability of Kentucky's energy supply. Investing in gas will only set us up to be having this conversation in another few decades while we continue using up a non-renewable resources and move no closer to effective alternatives. Why put it off when we can move forward now in a positive and long-term cost-effective solution with solar energy?

Renewable energy is increasingly more affordable than nonrenewable.
