Nukes Are Way Too Slow

Building a nuclear power plant takes too long. Only three have gone into service since 1997. The most recent --- the two Vogtle plants in Georgia --- took 18 years to complete in 2024. Imagine how much worse the climate crisis would be ignored if everyone believed nukes would solve it for them.

Even if it never had construction delays, cost overruns or an accident, nuclear power plants are hugely expensive. Those Vogtle nukes cost $36.8 Billion. Their average residential customer pays an extra $35/month for construction debt. Disconnections for falling behind on bills jumped by 20%.

The US still has NO permanent disposal site for the deadliest radioactive wastes from nuclear power plants. Conservative estimates say it will remain lethal for 250,000 years. The oldest human language is only a few thousand years old. In which languages will we write the instruction manual?
