For 71 years, this residence has been my home. It was home first to my grandparents where they raised their family, my father being the youngest son. Then it was home to my aunt and uncle and later me. My husband and I have raised our 3 children here and have had the same next door neighbors for most of the 50 plus years living here. We have had a good life and I'm sure, right now, beyond a shadow of doubt that I have taken this all for granted. I have always been able to look out my windows and see Gods handiwork in all directions. I didn't feel threatened with known destruction of the land all for the sake of money and so called progress. I assumed I would continue to live in peace in the home I cherish with no fear of ill effects from my environment due to industrial progress. Several years ago, I had every reason to believe the new landowner of the property directly across from my front yard was a good steward of the land he'd purchased. I saw such great improvements and saw the land being planted and harvested. I saw wildlife also reaping the benefits of this land being used so productively. Then I was totally blindsided to learn of the solar project being proposed. I've learned that we - the surrounding landowners - were contacted informing us of this project. However, I have yet to receive any notification of this solar project. The very first I've heard of this matter was 3 days ago via a friend's text. Needless to say, I am most disappointed and very concerned about this matter. If this project is completed, my view when looking out my window will be nothing but this solar stuff. The damage to this Kentucky environment and wildlife - well, who knows. I understand I am only one person and don't matter too much in the whole scheme of things, but I definitely DID NOT ask for this to come into my front yard. Also very sad and so discouraging is the knowledge that the stewardship of God's land has been replaced with whatever monetary gain that will be received. It's very hard to come to terms with disappointment in those one once respected. For this day, I am most thankful and blessed that I can look out my front window and see God's great handiwork and not the destruction brought on by this solar project.
