Subject: LG&E rate increase

Good morning, I was recently made aware of a couple of things regarding energy rates and consumption. First the building of a new massive AI data center in Louisville, KY owned and managed by Poe Companies and PowerHouse Data Centers. The main concern with this is the massive amounts of utilities this is going to consume in Louisville and potentially the state in general. I read that to handle the power load of such a massive center, LG&E is going to require a new facility being built. Consequently that brought with it the increase of customers gas and electricity bills. I ask of you, why is that factoring into our bills being increased when many of us residents do not want this data center being built in the first place? If they want to build this regardless of our thoughts, shouldn't they, then, require the owners of the data center to pay for the new LG&E facility?? I don't feel like that is fair at all. AI data centers also use massive amount of water to cool them. Are our water bills also going to increase because of this?

Residents want answers from, not only your organization, but other leaders around the state who are approving this.

Thank you for your time and I look forward to hearing a response.

Cara Flood
